Three Women Guilty in Eastern S. S. Fraud

Another American Girl
The Stratosphere Plane
Strange Sign of Love
Other Days, Other Greece

—By Arthur Brisbane—

AMELIA EARHART lands in Wales after 21 hours' flight across the Atlantic.

Her courageous exploit is doubly welcome. It shows what American girls can do, and will make it unnecessary for other American girls to risk their lives, the thing having now been done.

Three German engineers of highest rank are engaged on a "stratosphere airplane" to climb 10 miles. In that rarified air of slight resistance it is hoped to attain a speed of 400 miles an hour.

From Berlin to New York in five hours is the German plan. And many that read this will see it realized.

The German Experimental Institute of Aviation, with the German government behind it and every important scientist in Germany co-operating, indorses the stratosphere plane, in which passengers will travel hermetically sealed, breathing artificially made atmosphere above the zone of natural oxygen.

An endurance exhibition of dancing in New York, almost as bad as the cruel foot race across the continent, interests the public so mildly that the exhibition probably will not be repeated.

Dancers drop from fatigue, and one young man, who will marry his dancing partner when it is over, says, "If I am able to carry her around the room night and day for a week without wanting to kick her in the face, it must be love."

There are many grades of romance. The Fijian savage used to knock out his wife's upper front teeth, on the wedding day.

In sympathy with Macedonian and Thracian tobacco growers, labor in Greece calls a general strike. Sailors have joined and taken possession of Greek warships.

This would interest Alexander, of Macedonia and Themistocles, who persuaded the Greeks to build one important fighting fleet.

"Moscow is responsible," of course.

When ten men strike on the West Side of Chicago, "Moscow is responsible."

Workers in old Greek days were slaves. And in Sparta, those slaves, Helots, going to their work at sunrise, were often surprised and murdered by young Spartans as part of the latter's training for war.

New York says Chicago sent gangsters that "put over" a daring open air murder on Sunday afternoon. E. J. Jerge, alias Edward Carter, stopped his car when the red light flashed at a busy New York corner.

Bandits that had trailed him jumped from their car, shot three bullets into his head, neck and lungs, and then "made their getaway," after opening the car door and firing a few more bullets to make sure.

The Rev. Thomas Whelpley, who tried driving a New York taxicab between Sunday sermons to test the city's morality, calls New York "Gotham the Godless." He says the only commandment New York knows is "Don't get caught." Even that is an improvement. In Sodom, Gomorrah and ancient Rome they didn't care whether they got caught or not.

Not wanting to be caught is the dawn of conscience, just as a jelly fish shrinking from the touch represents the dawn of consciousness.

ONE COLLAPSES AND TWO HYSTERICAL AS THEY HEAR VERDICT

Mrs Eva Hessell Gordon and her sisters, Zella Hessel and Mrs. Rae Weichman, were today found guilty of receiving property stolen from the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., by George W. Gordon, in a sealed verdict returned by a Suffolk Superior Court jury.

Mrs. Weichman and another sister, Mrs. Nicholas Tedesco, a spectator, collapsed, while Zella Hessel and Mrs. Gordon became hysterical when the verdicts were read. Sentence will be imposed by Judge Joseph Quinn Thursday at 2 p. m.

PROPOSES COOLIDGE RUN FOR SENATORSHIP

President Coolidge may be drafted by his party in Massachusetts to run against Senator David I. Walsh.

The President's name is one of the 15 proposed as possible candidates to be decided on by the 44 members of the Essex Club—"The Men's Republican Organization of Essex County"—at a meeting arranged for next Wednesday evening at the Parker river summer camp of Moody Kimball.

The choice of the club will be placed before the State-wide unofficial convention of Republican leaders to pick a senatorial nominee at Symphony Hall on June 30.

To date the only announced candidacy for the nomination is that of Robert M. Washburn, president of the Roosevelt Club.

POWER TRUST PLOTS TO TIE UP U. S. EDUCATION

Washington, June 19—A giant campaign by organized electric power and gas interests to seize control of the country's entire educational system, clearing the way for domination of economic and political action, was disclosed here.

The immediate object is to instill "sound" doctrine into all Americans from the child of seven to "political, legislative, administrative and regulatory bodies."

To this end propagandists of these interests are "in contact with school

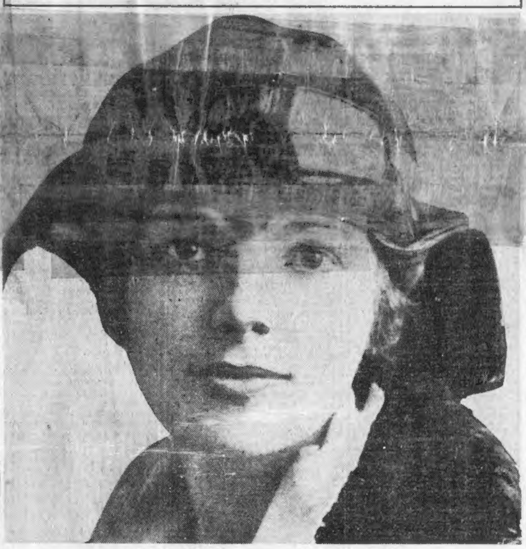
PROUDEST GIRL IN THE WORLD!



FIRST OF SEX TO FLY ATLANTIC

Amelia Earhart, Medford and Boston aviatrix, whose dream was fulfilled when she successfully hopped ocean as passenger in plane. She will be honored by the king and queen of England. She says she is the "proudest girl in the world" as result of her daring air trip.

BRITAIN PAYS HONORS TO EARHART GIRL; WILL MEET KING AND QUEEN

Southampton, Eng., June 19—Miss Amelia Earhart of Boston, the first woman to span the Atlantic by airplane, and her two companions—Pilot Wilmer Stultz and Mechanic Louis Gordon—reached the goal of their daring transoceanic flight here today in the monoplane Friendship.

The plane dropped upon the surface of the harbor shortly before 1:30 p. m., English summer time.

Stultz expressed the sentiments of the other fliers when he exclaimed: "I certainly am glad it is over. Now a good rest."

The Friendship had hopped off at Burry Port Inlet, on the South Wales coast, at 11:07, convoyed by a guiding plane,

'LADY LINDY' WANTS TO FLY TO THE NORTH POLE

Will Miss Amelia Earhart, the Atlantic behind her, next fly to the North Pole?

Boston and New York friends of the Medford girl, first to span the ocean in a plane, harbored this conjecture today—and it is based upon something firmer than a mere guess as to her future activities.

For in her blood is the lure of the Arctic wastes which called to Peary, to Amundsen, to Byrd. The wastes of ice and frozen seas that today hold Gen. Umberto Nobile's party in their unrelenting grasp.

Miss Earhart wants to go to the Pole!

Stocks were rallying in the closing period in Wall St. today, following a further setback. As it continues to mount daily the national good will fund for Capt. Harry W. Lyon, formerly of Boston, and James Warner, members of the crew of The Southern Cross, receives the hearty approval of men and women throughout the country.

A movement is now on foot in Boston, in connection with the drive for funds to give a reception to Capt. Lyon, navigator of the plane which successfully completed the flight from California to Australia. He was born in Charlestown and lived there many years.

Extolling the youth of today in the face of "the common wail" against youthful independence, Barrett Williams of Boston, class orator, today took to task "the appraisers now at work," at the annual Harvard class day exercises in Sanders Theater.

"Rarely has the change been so great between fathers and sons as in our day," he said. "Companionate marriage, bobbed hair, cigarettes, short skirts, fast cars, indifference and cynicism—twenty years ago these would have been a reformer's

READING AIDS RESIGN; 3 MAY NOT GET POSTS

The resignations of the assistants of former Atty.-Gen. Arthur K. Reading are in the hands of the new attorney-general, Joseph E. Warner.

Believing, however, that the interest of the State comes first, Mr. Warner will take no action until these officials have cleaned up important work in which some have been engaged for months.

It is understood that at least three of the assistants who were shown to be identified with work for the Decimo Club and the L. A. W. Corporation will fail of reappointment.

The office, under Reading, functioned with nine assistant and two junior assistants. It is the intention of the new attorney-general to cut this force down to a minimum.

BRITISH KING AND QUEEN EAGER TO HONOR HUB GIRL OCEAN FLIER

FETES ARE PLANNED FOR TRIO

The Friendship arrived here at 1.17 p. m., but did not descend immediately. It began circling over the harbor while Pilot Stultz picked out a suitable spot to come down.

The city was in gala array, ready and eager to greet the daring fliers.

Hundreds had gathered at vantage points on the docks and gaily decorated craft chugged to and fro in the harbor awaiting the arrival of the American aviatrix and her companions.

The Friendship was met by a fast motorboat as soon as it landed. The fliers were at once taken aboard the craft and officially welcomed by Mrs. Foster Welsh, Southampton's woman mayor and other city officials.

They were then escorted to a hotel for luncheon. Later the fliers departed for London, where they will be welcomed by the king and queen.

Although a murky fog hung over the harbor this morning, the weather had cleared before the arrival of the Friendship.

At the hotel where the fliers were feted a fire burned brightly in the grate of a private suite of rooms reserved for Miss Earhart. The room was transferred into a bower of roses with numerous bouquets sent by her admirers in Southampton and London.

Prominent among these flowers was a bouquet from Mrs. Frederick Guest, the former Amy Phipps of Pittsburgh, who backed Miss Earhart and her two companions in the flight from America.

American flags flew from the Marine Port and other buildings in greeting to the Friendship. Extra police were summoned to take care of the crowd and to protect Miss Earhart from the enthusiasm and outbursts of the populace.

The Friendship alighted here about one mile from the shore. The official welcomer's launch that had been waiting for the plane at once took it in tow and pulled it to the Imperial Airways dock where it was moored.

When the plane was made fast Miss Earhart and her companions left the machine to receive a tumultuous welcome. In the distinguished assembly upon the dock was American Consul Savage who extended greetings in the name of the United States.

The Friendship was anchored to a buoy just in front of the piers. The machine looked bright and shiny and showed not the slightest scar nor trace of the rough weather through which it had passed on the 2400-mile flight from Trepassey Bay, N. F., to Wales.

Unfurl U. S. Flag

A huge United States flag, donated by Mrs. Savage, wife of the American consul floated from a flagpole in the middle of the dock pier. It obstructed the view of some of the spectators, who wrapped the flag around the pole. Several Americans, who looked upon this action as a slight, rushed forward and unwrapped the banner and once again it floated out in the misty air.

As the big red and gold plane was being towed slowly through the water with the crew still inside, the spectators shouted and waved hats, handkerchiefs and flags. The cheering increased as the Friendship appeared around the stern of a big docked liner.

When Miss Earhart, wearing her flying clothes, appeared in the door way of the cabin, the welcoming din reached its climax.

Miss Earhart's patroness, Mrs. Guest, in greeting the girl, placed her arms around the aviatrix and exclaimed:

"I am so happy to know that you did it, but we knew you would."

Scores of little school children bobbed up as from nowhere as the fliers came ashore. They waved little American flags, but their piping cries of welcome were lost in the general tumult. As Miss Earhart stepped on the pier she was handed a huge bunch of American Beauty roses by Mrs. Guest.

Mrs. Welsh, the lady mayor of Southampton, made a little speech of welcome, saying how delighted the people of the city were to greet the first woman to accomplish a transatlantic flight.

Lauds Plane Feats

Miss Earhart replied briefly, saying:

"I am very happy that we have arrived here, but I had every confidence in our flight. I was sure it would be successful. And I wish to say that its success was due entirely to the splendid work and ability of Pilot Stultz and Mechanician Gordon."

Miss Earhart eliminated her own self entirely.

Miss Earhart and her companions smilingly posed for the photographers. Later they were escorted between lanes of nearly 2000 cheering men, women and children. The lady mayor placed her own motor car at the disposal of the daring sky voyagers.

Following the hotel luncheon there was a public reception, when many persons met Miss Earhart, shook hands with her and congratulated her upon her feat. Her modesty and retiring demeanor won the hearts of those who met her. She was described as "typically feminine."

American Consul Savage was delighted over the enthusiastic reception given to the girl and her plane mates.

"Americans may well be proud of Miss Earhart and her companions," he said.

On the way here from Burry Port the plane was first sighted over Calshot—the seat of a great

Girl Ocean Victor Scorns Movies

PEMBREY, Carmarthenshire, Wales, June 19—No movies for the "Lindy Girl."

Almost as soon as she landed here after her dramatic flight from Newfoundland, Amelia Earhart, the Boston social welfare worker, announced that movie impressarios need offer her no contracts, for the silver screen holds out no appeal.

"I don't know just what I will do," laughed the happy and triumphant girl, "but one thing is certain. I will not go into the movies."

This statement was corroborated by George Palmer Putnam, the publisher, who backed the venture.

"I do not believe that Miss Earhart intends to capitalize her feat in any sensational way," he said. "She will not go into the movies, nor will she go on the stage, though she may make a lecture tour and may write a book."

"When I was in Boston I asked her if she would accept a stage contract of $3000 a week in the event of a successful flight, and she said that $30,000 a week wouldn't induce her to capitalize her flight."

ONLY A PASSENGER

She was quick, also, once more to deny that there had been any race between her and Mabel Boll, "Queen of Diamonds," to be the first woman to make the transatlantic flight.

"There was no race," she said. "All that was faked up by the newspapers."

She was quick to show another Lindbergh quality, that of modesty.

"I want to make it clear," she said, "that I was simply a passenger on this trip. I did not handle the controls at all. Conditions were so unfavorable that we were compelled to fly by instrument all the way, and I have never had any experience in instrument flying.

"I would not imperil the lives of my two companions and myself simply in order to be able to say that I had piloted the Friendship part of the way.

The Boston girl said that she did not feel greatly fatigued, though the clear blue eyes showed weariness.

NO EXTRA CLOTHES

"We were flying through fog most of the time," she said, "but at no time did I feel the least worried, and I surely will attempt the east to west flight if I can have the proper machine and instruments.

"I was lying on my tummy on the fuselage when we circled the steamship America," she laughed, and explained: "I was trying to get a photograph of the ship.

Miss Earhart showed a trait wholly unfeminine when she declared that she had brought no extra clothes with her at all.

"I traveled light," she laughed, holding up a toothbrush. "There's my baggage."

"I am very proud and happy," she said as she started for the hotel for her much-needed sleep.

AUTOIST INJURED AS BUS CRASHES HIS CAR

Morris W. Potter of 83 Washington st., Islington, in Westwood, was taken to Faulkner Hospital suffering from possible concussion of the brain and contusions to the body, when the automobile he was driving was struck by a heavy bus on Center st., West Roxbury, today. According to the police Potter stopped when the car in front of him turned to the left and the bus crashed into the rear of his machine.

DRAWTENDERS RESCUE MAN IN HARBOR DIVE

Frank Lasky, 33, of Sixth st., East Cambridge, was rescued from the upper harbor today when he fell from the Charlestown bridge. Drawtenders on a nearby pier threw Lasky a rope which he caught, and with which he was hauled to safety. The man started to walk away, but was sent to the Haymarket Relief Hospital by Traffic Officer Fred Fallon, and was treated for immersion.

NORTH POLE FOR MISS EARHART

in New York today revealed this wish.

LURED BY NORTH POLE

The conjecture that her next great flight may be to the North Pole are based upon this desire.

"I wish the North Pole and the deserts did not lure me as they do," Miss Earhart wrote to her New York friend not long before the Friendship roared out of the narrow bay at Trepassey, N. F., on the flight to Wales.

"It is much better to settle down and look at the stars from one's own roof or through the windows of one's home."

But looking at the stars from a roof top has never satisfied Miss Earhart. The "Lady Lindy" for years has known the undeniable urge of adventure and romance and quest. The stars she has found are not the same when viewed from a roof top as when seen from a plane hurtling through the night 11,000 feet above the surface of the ocean.

MUST WORK ALONE

"What I do I must do alone," the girl filer wrote. Once she was offered a job at newspaper writing and she wrote in answer:

"Do you think I could acquire the newspaper lingo—clear, determined, with its well-known cadence? I am sure I never could bound into a room and bang out something on a typewriter, surrounded by other birds doing the same thing. I would have to crawl into a hole and struggle alone."

On one occasion she wrote:

"The big dirigible (the Los Angeles) has just passed overhead. Oh, boy! I must have one before I'm 80!"

ADVICE TO YOUNG MAN

To a young man of her acquaintance Miss Earhart wrote the following advice:

Go to college.

Do the little, grinding endless things before essaying the big ones.

Don't stare at the moon.

College comes only when one is young to be of any use.

On to the "fishing grounds" in a good used car. Select from bargains in Classified columns.

The Challenge of Life

By AMELIA EARHART

New York, June 19—Marion Perkins, who employed Miss Amelia Earhart at Denison House, Boston, writes in the Survey Graphic that last year after a discussion of lectures on "The Challenge of Life," Miss Earhart handed her some verses. Here they are:

Courage is the price that life exacts for granting peace.
The soul that knows it not, knows no release
From little things.

Knows that the livid loneliness of fear,
Nor mountain heights where bitter
joy can hear
The sound of wings.

How can life grant us boon of living, compensate
For dull gray ugliness and pregnant hate
Unless we dare.

The soul's dominion? Each time we make a choice, we pay
With courage to behold resistless day,
And count it fair.

2 DAYS OF RAIN SEEN FOR HUB

After the feast of sunshine over the week-end, the Weather Man today announced a famine for two or three days. A widespread storm area, with centers in New Mexico, Montana, Iowa and New York, covers almost the entire northern half of the United States and good weather has, for the nonce, entirely disappeared from the map.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Mostly cluody, probably with showers tonight and Wednesday; not much change in temperature; moderate easterly winds.

He is a member of the Revere Council, Knights of Columbus; the Catholic Order of Foresters, the Elks, Eagles, American Legion and Knights of St. Finbar.

Miss Hayes is a teacher of history at Revere high school and is prominent in Peabody church and musical circles.

Miss Earhart Not Afraid; Would Do Flight Again

Southampton, June 19 (AP)—Two oranges and a few tablets of malted milk were Miss Amelia Earhart's only food during her transatlantic flight.

"I shall never forget the coming of morning," she said on landing, "and the daylight after the long hours of night flying without knowing for a moment how far we were.

"I did not bother Pilot Stultz with many questions. I was content and was never frightened for a single minute with such a pilot in such a machine.

"I would do the flight again tomorrow with the greatest confidence."

WOMEN GUILTY IN GORDON CASE

The jury, after hearing evidence in the case for several weeks, retired at noon yesterday, reaching an agreement at 6 o'clock last night.

Their verdict was sealed and was read at the opening of court today by Clerk Walter Murray.

The first indictment read was that of Zella Hessell, who was found guilty on four counts. Clerk Murray then read the indictment against Mrs. Weichman, who fainted in her chair when she learned the jury had found her guilty in two counts. Then came the indictment against Mrs. Gordon, wife of the man who confessed to stealing about $600,000 from the steamship company. Mrs. Gordon was convicted in nine counts, and as the last count was read she and Zella began to sob hysterically, while Mrs. Tedesco shrieked and fainted in her seat on a spectator's bench.

Mrs. Weichman was taken to the detention room upstairs, where for more than an hour physicians attempted to revive her, without success. Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, who was attending a trial in the first session, then examined the woman and brought her to, sufficiently to learn that she has a weak heart, a chronic disease and bad nerves. She was taken to the hospital at Charles st. jail.

Mrs. Tedesco was revived in an anteroom, but later fainted in a telephone booth, wedging the door so that for a time it seemed impossible to get her out. It was at length accomplished by Officers Garrett and Daly of the liquor squad, and she was sent home.

The trial of the women arose out of the arrest and confession of Gordon, who testified to giving large sums of money to his wife and her sisters. Of this money some $46,000 was taken to Detroit by Zella and Rae Weichman and deposited in banks in that city.

Testifying in their own defense, the women admitted receiving the money, but contended they believed Gordon to be a wealthy man, one of the owners of the steamship company, and a stock market operator.

The case was prosecuted by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, on evidence obtained by Police Inspectors Frank Haggerty and John McCarthy.

SHE LONGS TO GREET HEROINE

Amelia Earhart, Boston's "Lindy Girl," will be back in the Hub almost as soon as a letter from her might be received here, it was said today by her mother, Mrs. Amy Otis Earhart, at her Medford home.

The Earhart home was showered today with letters and telegrams of congratulation, and some well wishers even sent flowers. Two unidentified women friends of the family called in person to felicitate the gray-haired mother.

Interrupted while reading the details of the girl transatlantic flier's epochal air journey from Newfoundland to Wales, the mother declared her happiness over Amelia's success, but said that Amelia will not fly back to America.

"Daughter will be back sooner than even a letter can reach me," Mrs. Earhart declared. "Of course, we are all anxious to see her and congratulate her personally.

"Daughter was chiefly interested in the scientific angle of the flight, rather than the financial. You see, we are all college bred and interested more or less in science.

'I never really thought daughter would become an aviatrix. I had believed she would become a biologist. You know, she is quite expert in that branch of science, and she showed remarkable insight at Columbia.

"As to the flight, I am glad seventy-five times over. I was never in doubt as to her success.

"She will not fly back but she will return sooner than expected, because the time that she had intended to spend in Europe after her flight was successful has been consumed waiting for the takeoff at Newfoundland.

"I do not know what her plans may be, but I do know that her flight will not affect, one whit, the plans of the family."

Miss Muriel Earhart, teacher in the Medford junior high school and a sister of the famed "Lindy Girl," was met by a group of her pupils at the door of her home today, as slicker-clad and carryying an umbrella, she emerged on her way to school.

The exuberant pupils congratulated Miss Muriel and then escorted her to the high school, where an informal reception was given her by fellow teachers.

"I am very happy over the success of my sister and I am very anxious to see her," said Muriel. Then she disappeared into her classrooms to begin the day's routine.

THEA'S FLIGHT BACKED BY MRS. STILLMAN

New York, June 19 (AP)—Miss Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, has obtained the backing of Mrs. James A. Stillman for a projected transatlantic flight to Germany which she hopes to start within the next few days.

She plans to fly to Old Orchard Beach, Me., in a large Bellanca monoplane named "North Star," purchased for her by the banker's wife from A. R. Martine and from the long smooth beach at the Maine resort begin her ocean flight as soon as weather conditions are favorable.

She will be accompanied by Albrecht Koenemann, German flier and mechanic, who will be her navigator and reflief pilot. Miss Rasche is 28 years old and has been flying for four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Stillman, both of whom have flown with the German girl, are to accompany her to Old Orchard in another plane and remain there with her until the takeoff for Berlin. Martini also will go to Maine as flight manager for Miss Rasche.

"I will do everything possible to help Miss Rasche fulfill her ambition," Mrs. Stillman said. "She is a wonderful flier and should make a great flight."

Miss Rasche was a Sunday guest of the Stillmans and told them of her ambition. Mrs. Stillman, after a short discussion with her husband offered to back the flight.

The plane, a single motored monoplane is powered with a Wright whirlwind motor, has a fuel capacity of 500 gallons and a cruising range of 5000 miles.

BREMEN HAILS ITS 3 HEROES

Bremen, Germany, June 19 (INS)—While church bells tolled, thousands cheered and flying squadrons roared overhead, Baron von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl and Maj. James Fitzmaurice, the crew of the German transatlantic plane, were escorted through the streets today by an automobile procession.

The fliers were pelted with flowers as they drove between flag-draped lines.

Men, women and school children and the members of various German societies hailed them.

High officials welcomed them formally.

Mary Pickford's Parisian Gowns Pay $3500 Duty

New York, June 19 (INS)—It was all just a big mistake, and she didn't know any better, the customs department agreed today, in allowing Mary Pickford to claim her 12 trunks of Paris gowns upon payment of about $3500 duty.

Granting that the film favorite didn't mean to do wrong, the government officials imposed no penalty for her under-valuation of $7000 worth of wearing apparel which she brought with her Saturday aboard the liner Roma.

On investigation it transpired that the screen star had paid less than the average customer for her gowns, because modistes were quick to sense the advertising value of their creations worn by Mary Pickford.

Democrats Favor "Wet" Referendum by States

Houston, June 19 (INS)—Although seven days stretch out ahead before the Democratic convention formally gets under way, machinery was set in motion today which friends of Governor Smith are confident will bring him the nomination on an early ballot.

Much water will go over the dam between now and the day when the balloting begins, but at present Smith seems to be the sole topic of discussion in this city.

With the arrival today of George R. Van Namee, pre-convention campaign manager, the Smith-for-President headquarters will be established and the missionary work will be started in earnest.

The Smith people already on the scene are hoping but not predicting that the New York executive will go over on the first ballot, but they are certain the second or third ballot will see him nominated.

Withdrawal of Gov. Ritchie of Maryland as a contender for the Presidential nomination has cheered the Smith forces.

Although the nominations will not be made until after the platform has been adopted, the Smith people are planning to see that the wishes of the New York governor are fairly well carried out in respect to this document.

At a conference in New York between Smith and Van Namee, it is understood here, the platform was discussed at great length. According to information here the much discussed wet plank in the platform will go only so far as to declare in favor of a referendum in each state as to whether the Eighteenth Amendment should be liberalized.

In all probability, Franklin D. Roosevelt will be selected to place Smith in nomination. Roosevelt served as Smith's campaign manager in 1924.

Senator Reed Hopes to Profit by Deadlock

Kansas City, Mo., June 19 (INS)—When and if the Democratic convention gets into a deadlock at Houston next week, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri confidently expects he will win the fight for the presidential nomination. The Senator's political backers said as much here today in announcing Reed's plans before the Missouri delegation leaves for the Texas city Thursday night.

"Senator Reed is not going to Houston just for the ride," said Charles M. Howell, Kansas City attorney and intimate friend of Reed. "The salient fact is this: Jim Reed is going to Houston to get the Democratic presidential nomination for Jim Reed."

Howell recalled that Reed was reared in and around Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Herbert Hoover was born at West Branch, 25 miles from Cedar Rapids.

"Reed and Hoover," he said, "did not swim in the same swimming hole; they were neighbors, but not aware of it. Any opinion each may have formed of the other was in later life. Nothing is in the way to prevent a battle that would make a new record in presidential campaigning."

The Reed leaders are counting on the solid South to stop Governor Smith, according to the Senator's backers here, and around Senator Furnifold Simmons of North Carolina and Governor Dan Moody of Texas are built high hopes that the latter two will work to break the Smith early lead in the balloting.

HOOVER A "PLANETARY" THINKER, SAYS FINLEY

Stanford University, Cal., June 19 (AP)—Herbert Hoover was styled a "planetary thinker" by Dr. John H Finley, an editor on the New York Times, in the commencement day address at Stanford University. "It is your great, though precarious, privilige," said Dr. Finley to the graduates, "to enter the world when it requires more than all else planetary thinkers, who think not in the sense of nationalism or internationalism, but regard the planet, earth, not only as the Lord's, but also as ours, the whole of it to enjoy from pole to pole and around the other way.

"Your president Dr. Wilbur, and your most distinguished graduate, Herbert Hoover, illustrate my meaning more than any other living Americans." and college students in more than 30 states, re-enforced by powerful pressure upon textbook writers and publishers and the hammering home of "sound" ideas in thousands of columns of free newspaper space.

IN SECRET DOCUMENT

Of such overpowering proportions is this movement that one of the leading propagandists boasted that in a few years he and his fellows would "create for the first time in the long history of mankind, a definite, sound school of economic thought, not only among economists, but among all the people."

These disclosures were made in a hitherto secret document subpoenaed by the trade commission, reporting in fullest detail the proceedings at a meeting of 19 directors of the propaganda activity gathered together from all sections of the country.

This document is considered in official quarters a master key to propaganda activities which for eight years past, in mounting volume, have flooded the country with material the power interests demanded should be thought, printed and taught.

It throws wide doors the commission has opened little by little, and summarizes and interprets—in the language of the power spokesmen themselves—reams of written reports which have gone into the commission's record piecemeal.

TEXTBOOK REVISION

The extravagant prophecy that the first "sound school of economic thought" in history was to be set up was made by J. B. Sheridan of St. Louis, director of a network of propaganda in Missouri which has reached out to virtually every section of the country. He was a witness in the investigation today.

The power interests delegated to this man the task of reviewing the textbooks of civics and economics used in all parts of the United States, to find out what was being taught that they did not want taught, and how to have it "eliminated."

His accomplishments and his aims were set forth at the meeting described in the document. It was held during the seventh annual convention of the American Gas Association in Atlantic City in October, 1925, with many utility leaders sitting in with the propagandists at their session.

Since that time, the commission's record shows, hundreds of thousands of dollars have been poured into propaganda work, and every form of it has been extended.

The Breeze That Never Ceases

Just as spring rains "wash" the atmosphere of dust particles, so the brisk circulation in an ice-chilled refrigerator washes the air as it passes over the ice. The melting ice absorbs odors and catches impurities arising from foods and carries them out through the drain, put there for that purpose.

The never ceasing breeze in the refrigerator chilled with pure, sparkling Boston Ice is a constant health protection.

Gentlemen:

As a storekeeper in a small rural city I wish to thank you for the kind of advertisement that your store placed in the Boston newspapers on June 13, entitled, "The Power of Little Things Well Done."

We have found occasion to study this advertisement to considerable extent as the fundamentals back of this constructive ad are identical with the fundamentals that we are striving to substantiate in the minds of our public for a day that we are looking forward to establishing as a particular day of each month in the years to come that will be remembered and thought as well of as your Wednesday and Thursday events are considered in Boston and its suburbs.

It may be out of line for us to be writing to you in this regard, but we did have such a fine reaction upon reading it that we could not resist the opportunity of expressing ourselves to you.

Very truly yours,

ENGLAND HONORS FIRST GIRL TO SPAN THE OCEAN BY AIRPLANE

British airdrome. A blanket of gray fog was there obstructing the sky and the plane was barely visible.

Upon reaching the inner harbor here the plane circled over the city at an altitude of more than 1000 feet.

Then it began to descend slowly and gracefully, gradually approaching the surface of the harbor, where it alighted as lightly as a feather. There was just a splash of water and then the Friendship was riding the choppy waves, its task completed.

When the fliers left Burry Port a heavy rain was falling. Groups of villagers gathered about the hotel at an early hour bent on catching a glimpse of the American girl and her skymates.

The plane Friendship lay in the harbor surrounded by a guard to keep off the curious. It had been refueled and made ready for an early start.

Stultz is not averse to flying back to America.

"I wouldn't mind flying back," he said, "and I shall if I get the right kind of an offer. I'd like to use this same plane. It is now in perfect condition. We're going to make a detailed inspection soon.

Girl Smiled Through

"I had no difficulty finding my way across despite the fact visibility was very poor. I knew well where I was all of the time, and when we struck Britain I do not believe I was more than a mile off my estimated course.

"I piloted the Friendship myself all of the way across except for a couple of hours Sunday evening when 'Slim' Gordon took charge.

"Miss Earhart bore the strain of the trip well. She never for one moment thought we wouldn't arrive safely and she constantly kept up our spirits with her smile and good sportsmanship."

Stultz looked ruefully at his grease-spattered flying suit. "My first job in London," he said, "is to buy some clothes. These I have are in a bad way."

The crew of the Friendship would not let Miss Earhart give them all the credit for the venture when they explained their own opinions of the trip.

"Amelia was wonderful," said Pilot Stultz.

"I never saw anything like the nerve of that girl," added Lou Gordon.

Miss Earhart was taken off first when the fliers reached the pier and as Mrs. Guest, her patron, embraced her the sponsor of the flight said: "Well done, my girl."

Miss Earhart smiled and thanked Mrs. Guest. She was jolly but a little too overcome with emotion to talk much.

It was at Burry Port, Wales, that a handful of fishermen saw the making of history, when the great orange colored ship dropped out of the skies, and the first woman in history had crossed the Atlantic by air.

It was 12:40 p. m., 7:40 Boston time, when the Friendship circled once, and then descended in the estuary at the Welsh port. The few witnesses were fearful that she would crash into a huge chimney stack which loomed through the

Paris Gowns Await Girl at End of Daring Trip

Soon after 8 o'clock the crew of the Friendship appeared dressed in flying clothes and prepared for their trip to Southampton.

As the fliers entered a rowboat to go out to the Friendship, someone threw a bunch of carnations into Miss Earhart's lap. She caught them up to her face and exclaimed:

"Oh, how sweet!"

The party climbed into the cabin of the plane a few minutes later and, despite the rain, soon hopped off for Southampton.

After her epochal ocean flight Miss Earhart slept like a child in the picturesque Ashburnham Hotel in Burry Port which overlooks the famous golf links of that name and has the mountains for a background. She was awakened by the singing of the birds whose thrilling notes floated in through the open window.

"Alone In the World."

"How lovely your country is," she said to Miss Alice Jones, the proprietress of the hotel, when she took Miss Earhart's breakfast up to her.

"The stilliness and silence," she continued, "bring back again the almost awesome feeling which came to me as hour after hour we pushed forward through thick clouds and fog. It was as if we were the only persons in the whole wide world."

Amelia had with her for baggage when she landed in England exactly one article, a toothbrush. Not a furbelow to take the place of her aviation costume, no dainty footwear, nothing dear to the feminine heart.

But Mrs. Guest, realizing the need, has all these things, and there is more than a chance that the Boston girl will forget the celebration in her honor for the time as she looks over the gifts the wealthy Mrs. Guest has in store for her.

There are frocks from Paris, evening gowns, sheer silk stockings, dainty lingerie, an imposing array of boots and shoes—everything.

Mrs. Guest had hardly received the word that the Friendship had landed than she went shopping, and gave the modistes carte blanche.

All these gifts are packed in a traveling case equipped with fittings in gold and mother of pearl.

Proud and happy as was Amelia Earhart when she made her landing, she is bound to be more delighted than ever today, for no woman could resist the beautiful things that the enthusiastic Mrs. Guest has supplied—and despite her courage and daring Amelia Earhart is still a woman.

Towns all along the route to London prepared celebrations of their own, so that the motor trip there was crowded with incident.

London, too, is preparing for the American girl's advent with all the honors accorded to a visiting princess.

Of course, the big event will come when she meets the King and Queen, and these two personages have already expressed the hope that the girl will meet them and tell them something of her venturesome hop.

But there are other celebrities who are anxious to join in the honors to the "Lindy Girl."

She will be the guest of Captain and Mrs. Guest throughout her stay in England. Lady Astor will be one of the first to greet and congratulate her countrywoman. Lady Heath, noted English aviatrix, is hurrying Londonward from the Scotch moors to join in the celebration in honor of the girl flier.

France to Hail Her

Her somewhat vague schedule does not yet say how long she will remain in England, but her stay, however long or short it may be, will be crowded with receptions, social affairs and celebrations in her honor.

And then she is not done. France is waiting to acclaim her. In fact France is impatient at her delay in England, and queries fly across the Channel asking when she contemplates her visit to the land where Lindy landed.

According to the present schedule Amelia Earhart will sail from Europe on the Ile de France on June 27. No more happy moment could have been picked for the girl will then land in her homeland on July 4, which America will immediately convert into a double holiday.

The American girl rose early today, hours earlier than her male mates, who showed the long strain much more than did she, though she had not slept on the flight any more than they had.

"To think," she laughed, "that 48 hours ago I was in America and now I'm in Wales."

Her eyes lightened as a breakfast tray burdened with bacon and eggs as set before her, and her lips parted in a broad smile.

"Well," she exclaimed, "it's jolly good to feel that I have an appetite that can do justice to such a meal."

Miss Earhart made good her word and ate the bacon and eggs and a plate of toast and marmalade.

Before starting for the boat that was to take her to the Friendship she stepped for a moment into the hotel drawing room and looked out on the well-kept lawn.

Was Not Afraid

"I can't help feeling elated," she exclaimed, throwing back her curly head. "I suppose the flight did require pluck and courage, but all the credit is due to Bill Stultz and Slim Gordon. They're the most wonderful fliers in the world.

Girl Sure of Victory as Plane Winged Over Seas

"Really, I hardly know what to say of my impressions as I lay on the floor of the Friendship's fuselage. I tried to jot them down, but words seemed such poor things to express what was surging through my brain.

There is not what I would call any physical thrill; rather, it was a mental exhilaration that was overpowering.

"As the hours went by the feeling gradually entered my mind that we were going to cover that illimitable stretch of water which tumbled beneath us. All I could make out was that little electric light illuminating the instruments. The thought came to me: 'I wonder if any of the great liners have seen that faint light.'

"Without any boasting, I think I could say that at no time during the journey did I seem in the slightest degree afraid. I felt cold and uncomfortable, and would climb into the cockpit and get a little warmth. Then I would go back into the fuselage and on the floor endeavoring to write my diary."

Faced Death in Air

Pilot Stultz, intelling of the trip, said:

"There were times when our hearts beat a little faster than usual. Those were when the motorse—never more than one at a time—began to misfire when the driving rain would get into them. The rain lasted more than half the way.

"When the engines began to miss we didn't know what to do. We knew there was no way of repairing them in the air. So we hoped for the best and breathed a sigh of relief when the motors picked up again and kept on with a steady roar.

"If just one of the motors had gone wrong we could have kept going, but it would have injured our chance of getting completely across, if two of them had failed, we'll——" fog, but Pilot Stultz carefully maneuvered so as to avert the threatened crash, and nothing marred the end of the great adventure.

The flight from Trepassey Bay, Newfoundland, had consumed 20 hours and 49 minutes, and there were but 25 gallons of fuel left in the tanks.

The alarm was spread through the town and in a few moments the entire population of the Welsh village was gathered on the shore too see the air-adventurers as they came to land in motor boats.

Ruth Elder Wires Earhart Girl Her Congratulations

Paris, June 19 (AP)—Ruth Elder, who failed to fly the atlantic last year and was rescued from the sea, telegraphed this message to Miss Amelia Earhart:

"Congratulations on your history making flight. I was with you in spirit throughout the journey. I appreciate the exploit better than anyone, I feel, and I am wonderfully glad that the first woman to cross safely was an American girl."

AMELIA WAS SMILING

The men were weary-eyed when they landed, but the Boston girl was smiling and cheerful, only a slightly-drawn look betraying the ordeal she had undergone.

While the men immediately sought beds in the local hotel, the girl hastened to send a cablegram to her mother in Medford, Massachusetts, and then stayed awake for hours receiving messages of congratulation.

She was particularly delighted with one from President Coolidge and another from Governor Fuller of her home State. The President's message read:

"I wish to express to you, the first woman successfully to span the North Atlantic by air, the great admiration of myself and the people of the United States for your splendid flight.

FULLER'S MESSAGE

"Our pride in this accomplishment of a countrywoman is equalled only by our joy over her safe arrival. The courageous collaboration of the co-pilot, Mr. Wilmer Stultz, and Mr. Gordon likewise merit our cordial congratulations."

There was still another from Ambassador Kellogg reading:

"I rejoice in your successful flight across the North Atlantic and congratulate you most heartily on your magnificent achievement. Extend my greetings to Co-pilot Stultz and to Gordon for their share in this brave exploit."

Porter Adams sent the following cablegram to Miss Earhart, who is vice-president of the Boston chapter of the N. A. A.

"The National Aeronautic Association congratulates you and your companions on your splendid flight, which by its careful preparation and brilliant execution will prove of real value to the advancement of aviation."

"I am the proudest woman in the whole world," the daring girl said when told where she had landed.

The three were not particularly disappointed when they discovered they had landed on the Welsh coast instead of at Valencia Island, Ireland, or Southampton. Stultz remarked he had discounted the force of the strong northerly winds and let them blow the plane about too much.

One of the most cordial of the congratulatory messages the fliers received was from the Air League of the British Empire, stating, simply, "Heartiest congratulations on your magnificent achievement."

SIX ARRESTED IN HUNT FOR SMUGGLED ALIENS

St. Albans, June 19—The first man hunt that St. Albans has experienced for some time took place when Immigration Officer Grover Fletcher, assisted by the night force and railroad men, ransacked the city for six Czecho-Slovaks who were smuggled in by a Canadian. They were finally rounded up and placed in the Franklin county jail, where they are awaiting deportation proceedings.

HEALTH EXPERT RAPS HOLIDAY "DAINTIES"

By Dr. P. H. MULLOWNEY
Director, Hearst Health Laboratory

Sanitary precautions were ignored in the sale of foodstuffs on the playground at Charlestown during the celebration of the holiday.

Violations of every description were observed by the director of the Hearst Health Laboratory on a visit there.

Dr. Mullowney

Candy machines, out in the open, were making up their products with no regard to protection from contamination by dirt and dust.

Only one frankfurter stand out of all that were employed in supplying the needs of the public was found to be equipped with any sort of protection. So too with regard to ice cream cones and the straws used in dispensing drinks. The most serious violation of all was the absence of any equipment to sterilize mugs and glasses used at many stands selling tonic.

NO THOROUGH CLEANSING

Some of the proprietors of these stands used mugs and glasses over and over again to customers as they came along in turn, with no further cleansing than a rapid dipping in a bucket of cold water.

It was a return to primal conditions in food dispensing with a vengeance.

Representatives of the health department were on hand and worked valiantly to overcome conditions, but the crowds and the prevailing jumble would have necessitated a large number of inspectors to cope with the problem.

It is suggested that in future celebrations of this nature that all applicants for these privileges be approved by the health department after proper inquiry into the proposed equipment and methods so that foodstuffs will be served in as sanitary a manner as possible.

RESTRICTIONS NEEDED

As a further suggestion, consideration should be given in issuing these permits to see that restrictions as to exposure of foodstuffs by vendors be imposed.

Much good would come from the action of the city authorities in seeing to it that the nuisance from dust be limited by the liberal use of sprinklers.

By all means beverages should not be allowed to be served in glasses or mugs at temporary stands on account of the lack of facilities for sterilization. Paper cups and straws kept from contamination of dust and dirt should be approved for use.

DEATH AND RUIN IN PATH OF TERRIFIC HAILSTORM

Bucharest, Roumania, June 19 (INS)—Many persons were killed and scores wounded today in the districts of Sinaia, Braila, Jalomiza, Prahova and Covulrui by a violent hail storm during which hail stones weighing nearly half a pound fell. Crops were destroyed. A train was wrecked on the Bucharest-Constanza line and many persons hurt.

King at Ascot Races

Ascot, Eng., June 19 (INS)—Ascot race week, the most fashionable event in British turfdom, opened today. Although the weather was threatening the track was in perfect condition. A fashionable throng applauded as King George and Queen Mary made their state procession to the royal box.

M'FALL, SLAYER OF LAWRENCE GIRL, ON TRIAL

Jersey City, N. J., June 19 (AP)—Walter McFall, former New York State trooper and son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McFall of Geneseo, N. Y., went on trial today for murder. The State asked conviction in the first degree, the penalty for which is death.

McFall was indicted for the fatal shooting of his second wife, Florence Hersey McFall, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hersey of Lawrence, Mass., in West New York on January 14.

He also shot himself and was in a serious condition for weeks. He still has a bullet in his head which surgeons feared to remove lest the operation prove fatal.

Counsel said that McFall's defence would be that he shot himself before he shot his wife and that he was insane through jealousy when he ran through the streets to take her from a friend's house to the street and there shoot her.

Several days after the slaying a woman who said she was Mrs. Anna May Schoonmaker McFall, 2., of Coxsackie, N. Y., appeared at police headquarters claiming to be McFall's wife. She said they were married February 28, 1924, by Rev. Earl Hubbard of Coxsackie M. E. Church and that they lived together with McFall's mother in Geneseo and later in Weehawken.

Mrs. McFall was buried in Potter's field, her parents refusing to take her body.

WATERWAYS OBSOLETE, COAL MERCHANTS TOLD

The inland waterways of this country, as common carriers, are as obsolete as the packhorse and the prairie wagon, John M. Fitzgerald, assistant to chairman, Eastern Railways' Committee on Public Relations, said today at the annual convention of the National Retail Coal Merchants Association at the New Ocean House, Swampscott. He said that in the last 8 years the railroads have spent about $6,000,000 of new capital for improvement of plant and equipment. In this period he said freight traffic has increased about 5 per cent and freight speed between terminals has increased 19 per cent.

FUNERAL RITES OMITTED FOR PLANE VICTIM

Nashua, N. H., June 19 (AP)—A request of former State Senator Marcel Theriault, who was killed in an airplane accident Sunday, that when he died his body be buried without religious services, was complied with at his funeral today.

Theriault was burned to death when the airplane crashed.

Theriault had asked that his body be interred in a quiet and specially selected spot on the south side of Riverside farm, where he maintained a summer camp. Atty. George M. French, a friend, addressed a few remarks to the group about the grave and Walter L. Barker read a psalm. No clergyman was present.

Miss Katheryn Thomas, who also was burned to death in the accident, was to be buried with customery funeral services this afternoon.

George Lennox of Wichita Falls, Kas., was reported today still in a serious condition in the hospital.

ELKS HALED TO COURT IN CARNIVAL LOTTERY

Warrants against John R. Bell and Michael J. Gallagher, a Norwood druggist, both members of the Norwood lodge of Elks, were obtained in Dedham Court today by Marcus F. Jacobson of Cambridge, an agent of the Watch and Ward Society.

WINNER'S EYES BEAM

"Don't tell me I won a prize or I'll faint/" was Mrs. Anna V. Gibson's greeting to the representative of the Boston Evening American, who called on her at her home in Sterling Junction to announce that she had won the first cash prize of $50.

But Mrs. Gibson's appearance belied any danger of collapse. Her eyes beamed and she plainly showed her surprise and delight. Mrs. Gibson's husband, who was a travelling salesman, died three years ago. The family lived in Jefferson, Me., at the time.

After her husband's death Mrs. Gibson went to the Bullard farm in Sterling Junction, about eight miles from Worcester, to keep house for her dead sister's husband, Frank Morrison, who is employed as gardener on the farm. Mrs. Gibson has four children of her own and has been a mother to her sister's boy, Frank Donald Morrison, eleven.

Her children are Margaret Ruth Gibson, fourteen a sophomore at Sterling high school; Richard Haskell Gibson, eleven; Helen Gibson, eight, and Mary Gardner Gibson, who is seven.

DRILLS HER CHILDREN

"I was tremendously interested in the Boston Evening American's Mothers' Safety Don't contest," said Mrs. Gibson. "I had given much thought to the matter of safety in view of the fact that my children have to walk a half-mile or more to the bus that carries them and other children to school.

"I had instructed and drilled them so faithfully in safety don'ts that I now feel that they are capable of caring for themselves and it has removed much worry I can tell you.

"I wrote my code of 10 don'ts, never expecting I would win a prize, and above all, first prize among so many thousand contestants.

"I just wrote what I believed and practiced with my children at home. I put my whole heart into it, but more to assist other mothers and their little ones than to win a prize.

"I feel grateful, however, to think the judges and Mr. Goodwin liked my Safety Don'ts. I have always admired Mr. Goodwin and regretted when he left the registrar's office. I thought he was frank and honest and had the interest of the public at heart.

"I have read the Boston Evening American for years and wouldn't be without it. I can't begin to tell how surprised and pleased I am. We all—the children and everyone—followed the contest from day to day and felt it did much good. I am sure every mother in New England felt as grateful for the Boston Evening American's safety drive as I did."

The Safety Don'ts and picture of the winner of second prize will be published tomorrow and those of the winner of third prize on Thursday.

This Is the Day

when all the world looks youthful. Mothers and daughters look like sisters. I always wondered what Florence did to keep so young. Her lovely hair, which never faded or turned gray, is a crowning glory. This is because when the first telltale streaks of gray began to appear she started using the Ann J. MacHale Hair Color Restorer, that wonderful preparation to restore the color of your hair. It is not a dye. It brought all the natural color and sheen back to her hair. Her face is always soft and fair and free from wrinkles because she uses "Res-a-viv," priced at $1, at the S. S. Pierce Company, at 69 Tremont Street. "Cuticle Ice," that matchless cream for the hands, is priced at 75c a jar. It keeps her hands dainty and fair and soft. Wasn't Florence fine to tell me all about these products and not keep the secret to herself? Ann MacHale's Hair Color Restorer is priced at $1 a bottle. This is good for men also, for they, too, like to capture Youth and keep it fast. Let's visit the S. S. Pierce Company and get some of these wonderful preparations for our very own.

A Removal Sale

is going on at Miss Wilcomb's at 367 Boylston St., Standish Bldg. She doesn't want to move her large stock of goods so she is willing to sacrifice them at rather drastic prices for such fine styles and careful workmanship. Exquisitely made hats are priced at $2, $3 and $5, and gorgeous frocks worth much more are now reduced to $10.50, $12.50 and $15. Just think of being able to get frocks and hats with all the Boylston Street charm at bargain prices. I know that we'll be able to pick up just what we want at this smart shop!

The Cool Waves Are Calling and we answer the call of summer with a trip to the beach. Bathing in the cool, blue sea with sea-tossed but sea-worthy tomboy suits with stripes or fancy weave, in chanel, navy, copen and jade, priced at $8.75. Possibly you'd prefer a vivid suit of printed pussy-willow taffeta, in the famous Mallinson brand, with panties that match and add verve to the effect, priced at $25. There are beach sets, wraps, caps, mat and pillow or modernistic smart sets in linen crash. Ensemble suits enter the realm of bathing with white jersey coats, blue edged. All these are found in Jordan Marsh Company's Sea Side Shop, Second Floor, Main Store.

Sunny Golden Hair

is kept more beautiful by the use of Flozor—for it enhances its natural charm and gives it an alluring gleam. It is put up by Lesquendieu of Paris, and sold exclusively by Meyer Jonasson & Co. Toiletries Dept., first floor, Tremont and Boylston sts. Flozor is a hair lightener and beautifier made from the herb camomile, and is equally good for blondes and brunettes. You apply it after the hair has been thoroughly shampooed and dried. It retails at $2.50. You'll be so happy that you found it when you see your hair afterwards. You'd like some, wouldn't you, Anne?

The Three Ages

of Women correspond to three conditions: Beautiful curves — overfat — reducing. This eternal triangle brings sleepless nights, days filled with anxiety, and the search for relief. Unload fat and you have wrinkles. The shrinking of your face and neck seams them into parallel strips and flabby folds. The Post Beauty Course is the pearl of great price in such cases. It banishes blackheads, rejuvenates the skin and restores its elasticity. Absorption removes dead tissue and rebuilds the cushions under the wrinkles as Nature irons them out. A $5 facial for $2 demonstrates what you can do at home. Tel. Haymarket 1647 for appointment or call at Post Institute, 6 Beacon St., Room 919.

The Shades of Night

are falling and it's time for rest. But not until we use our Virozol products, dear. First the fragrant Virozol Almond Cream which is excellent for cleansing the face. The price is $1 a jar. Then Virozol Swedish Face Bath patted on the face with a bit of cotton. It is so refreshing and such a fine astringent, and is priced at $1.25 a bottle. Then in the morning a faint dusting of elusive Virozol Face Powder which is very good for our skin. Never forget the use of these delightful products on sale at the C. F. Hovey Co., 33 Summer St., Toilet Goods Dept., first floor.

What a delightful holiday weekend we had! It was so hard to feel this morning that it was actually over. But then we had our shopping tour to look forward to. Golden hours in shops so filled with gleaming Summer colors. We finished our shopping a little early today so I guess there'll be time for us to have a little visit before you leave for home.

JUNE BRIDES' GOWNS ALLURING, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Garments Worn by Mrs. Daniel Simonds, 2d, in Trinity Church Wedding Put Emphasis on Simplicity

BRIDES IN TRAILING SATINS AND BRIDES IN GOSSAMER LACES MOVE RADIANTLY through June's blossom scented mazes. But none more sweet-eyed, more truly the epitome of girl-bride loveliness than Mrs. Daniel Simonds, 2d. As Miss Elizabeth Sprague she moved serenely up Trinity's flower-marked aisle. Her trailing satins and floating tulle emphasized how effective rich gleaming satin is quite unadorned, and how cameo-like beauty such as hers is enhanced by a face veil of tulle. There was a train, long and pointed, starting from the basque, a pearl bandeau held her veil, and for flowers she carried calla lilies.

ENORMOUS URNS FILLED with bright pink gladioli and many gleaming tapers gave Trinity's altar an added beauty of color and light. A boys' choir chanted in processional and recessional. Society, gladsomely arrayed, rustled into the pews. Bride attendants in fluttery chiffons followed in the wake of formally turned out ushers. Altogether, the Sprague-Simonds bridal picture was delightfully satisfying even in a month more than richly endowed with such pageantry.

PRETTY GIRLS LOOKED OUT from beneath drooping leghorn hats wound about their brims with long trailing chiffons scarves and pearl strands. Fluttery chiffons clothed them; chiffons adroitly fashioned in the cascade effect, with a slender long wisp of chiffon swinging to satin clad heels. Mrs. Shaw Sprague and Miss Sally Sprague, matron and maid of honor for the bride, wore new-leaf green, and the others, ten in all, wore a citron yellow, as odd as it was effective. Enormous arm clusters of ward roses contrasted beautifully with the green tints.

MRS. PHINEAS SPRAGUE carried a cluster of the same roses, to enhance the mellow beauty of her chiffon coat ensemble. Hat and frock, coat and shoes were all of the same tone, a rich marigold yellow. Mrs. Sprague had for escort up the aisle her little grandson, the smal. son of Mr. and Mrs. Shaw Sprague, (Lucy Carnegie). Wedding guests left Trinity after the ceremonial for the short motor trip to the Sprague town house in Commonwealth ave., there to offer felicitations, and many of them later in the afternoon to appear in numbers at the Country Club for the races.

MISS HELEN MOSELEY AND Miss Betty Soule in floppy leghorns and with chiffon frocks fluttering in the breeze, were two of the Country Club throng for the second day of racing, after the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft went on from wedding to races, their daughter, Miss Jessie Bancroft, and Mr. Cox, her fiance, of the group. Miss Mary Louise Almy's radiant beauty enlivened both scenes, and her violet frock and hat were as becoming as girl could wish. Miss Helen Rust's frock was straight line and her hat one of the enormous affairs that serve for parasol as well.

BEREFT WOULD RACE DAY be for perfect sartorial effects, were it not for Henry Vaughan and his "topper," and B. Nason Hamlin's gray bowler. Bereft also would Race Day be of the true track atmosphere were it not for a few valiant souls who muster a prancing four and roll out grandly atop a "coach." The yellow and black coach bearing the initials of Bayard Tuckerman on its door panel came rolling into the grounds to a place beside the rail, bearing a smart masculine contingent. Philip Saltonstall was one of them.

HORNS TOOTED AND WHIPS cracked from a trio of coaches that tooled in with dash and swirled up to places by the rail. William Vanderbilt and his four high stepping grays and the coach "Venture" should have been a part of the picture. Certainly that famous coach and its present owner belong in such a scene as the Country Club course presented under brilliant skies. Turf never was greener, nor crowds smarter. Well may the Eastern Horse Club governors and officials consider that the renewal of the races each year is definitely on the program.

WATCHING HER STEEPLECHASER "Iollan" come racing home winner of the Eastern Dog Club Steeplechase was Miss Ruth Neyhart's great pleasure. Miss Ruth Neyhart's win yesterday followed up Miss Dorothy Neyhart's win of the girls' race Saturday, and indicates that these two sisters are well advanced on the road to success in their chosen line. Miss Ruth Neyhart, receiving a handsome piece of plate from the hands of Henry Vaughan in the judges' stand was very attractive in bright printed silk. Miss Dorothy's frock and hat were soft gray, the feminine sort of thing she so seldom appears in, being definitely and decidedly "horsey."

THE EASTERN HORSE CLUB'S president, John R. Macomber, watched his blue and gold and "Redbridge" race in the winner of the Groton. Mrs. Sumner Pingree was in the Weld box as Mr. Pingree came in second on Endless, of Flying Horse Farm stables in the Road Riders' race. The sixth and last race on the second day was a pretty contest, Mr. Pingree and Mrs. Geraldyne Redmond's "Datura" providing a neck and neck finish that thrilled the stands. Wednesday at Raceland there will be a repetition of all these thrills, with all the swagger set out in force to complete its three days of racing hereabouts.

THOUSANDS GET THRILLS AT 101 RANCH SHOW

Hundreds of kids and thousands of adults cheered themselves hoarse as they witnessed the various stunts of the cowboys and cowgirls and foreign cavalrymen of Miller Brothers 101 Ranch Wild West and Far East Circus which opened at Andrew sq. yesterday.

Horses that danced to the strains of popular music, longhorn steers that jumped madly about the huge ring in an effort to throw their determined riders, elephants that went through their tricks like seasoned performers, and race horses that seemed to float through the air were among the many attractions of the circus.

A feature that thrilled all present was the demonstration of Cossack horsemanship by Don and Ural Cossacks, all veterans of the late czar's army. These men seemed perfectly at home on the backs of horses that dashed madly about the ring. Their feats thrilled the audience.

The Indians did much to amuse and thrill the spectators. Their ceremonial dances were most interesting.

Capt. Ted Lewis was one of the stars of the show. His skill with the rifle and revolver amazed the huge audience.

"Julius Caesar," a pageant of Ancient Rome, was the most unusual number on the program. A realistic chariot race was the big feature of this number. The circus will remain until next Saturday. Nearly 1100 performers and 600 animals take part in the show.

SCHOONER FORD TOTAL WRECK

St. John's, N. F., June 19 (AP)—The Gloucester fishing schooner Henry Ford, which grounded yesterday at Rocky Harbor, Bonne Bay, today was reported to be a total wreck. Her crew of 25 is safe.

The Henry Ford, well known as a racing schooner, took part in the international fishermen's race a few years ago.

Northampton, June 19—A gigantic check, three feet long, drawn for $62,396.18 was presented to Pres. William Allan Neilson of Smith College at the alumnae frolic. The check represents the first instalment on the alumnae fund, which is to be the regular channel of alumnae-giving to the college, and will be used for the increase of faculty salaries.

AIRPORT HEAD TELLS NEED OF DEVELOPMENT

"We have here on Jeffries Point the possibilities of the best airport in the United States, but to date we are so far back that the rest of the country is laughing at us."

Lieut. Duke

Thus Lieut. Donald G. Duke, commander of the Boston airport, today viewed the procrastination with which Boston and Massachusetts are treating his adopted "child."

"Due to the smallness of the field, the War Department has asked the various commercial companies operating here to apply for permits to use the airport, and from the way things look today not all these applications will be granted, which will cause many of the commercial boys to seek other fields, most of which will be cow pastures, thus creating the worst possible conditions.

"If the Boston airport were fully developed we could install an adequate method of checking equipment and personnel, thus insuring the riding public the highest standards of safety. If the companies are forced to move off the airport they will be scattered far and wide and we will have planes flying that really should not be allowed out of hangars."

HALE LEADS BY 30,000

Portland, Me., June 19 (AP)—Sen. Frederick Hale was renominated for a third term in the Republican primary, easily defeating Gov. Ralph O. Brewster by more than 30,000 votes.

Congressman Ira G. Hersey, Republican, Houlton, who is serving his sixth term as representative from the fourth district, was defeated for renomination by Donald W. Snow, a Bangor attorney.

In a four-cornered contest for the Republican nomination for governor, William Tudor Gardiner, wealthy resident of Gardiner and former speaker of the House of Representatives, was a winner by a vote larger than the combined totals of his opponents.

Congressman Carroll L. Beedy, Wallace H. White Jr., and John E. Nelson, all Republicans, were renominated without opposition.

There were no contests for the major Democratic nominations.

The nominees are: For senator, Herbert E. Holmes Lewiston, an attorney; for governor, Edward C. Moran, Jr., Rockland, a business man.

HARVARD CLASS ORATOR LAUDS THE NEW AGE

nightmare. Today they are but a common wail.

"Going to the dogs may sum up these traits, but such a process only takes place in the mind's eye and is wholly relative. A talking monkey might make the same assertions.

GIVE THEM A HEARING.

"With all respect, we ask those who would have conformance with the past, if the past is worthy of conformance. The answer may suggest that even an effusive welcome should just now be accorded an independent, venturesome and even defiant youth.

"Is it not time that the disciples of change were given a hearing? Must the scroll of tradition be accepted wholesale with such blots upon it? There must be a limit to the perpetuation of error.

"Individualism has harmed no one except the coward—and his place is in the rear guard.

"The appraisers now are at work valuing our inheritance. They have found a once fair world devastated by the most brutal war in history. There are debts surpassing calculation. A peace was made which was not a peace, and it was dictated, not negotiated.

WRITTEN IN RED INK

"Our political and moral items must be written in red ink. They show a cabinet in which one member was bribed to deliver a public domain valued at a thousand million dollars. Another member secured a portion of the bribe funds to pay off the party deficit, while a third turned the department of justice into a den of corruption.

"We have seen a reaction in our influence on our elders. Has not the flapper brought up the grandmothers to bobbed hair and knee skirts, tobacco and cocktails? It is even stated that our fathers insist upon well filled cellars and trustworthy bootleggers, despite the amendment they themselves added to the Constitution.

"We deal with sex and social problems openly and not too seriously. If companionate marriage, sex education and similar plans seem daring innovations—are they more a menace to the correct solution than prudery and the dreary censorship of frank discussion that still infests the Watch and Ward?

YESTERDAY AND TODAY

"'To war; to imperialism; to greater facilities for travel; to the more universal spread of news—are due the excessive excitement, excessive doubt, the essential difference between yesterday and today."

The Sanders Theater exercises opened after the senior class chapel service at Appleton chapel.

The class poem, written and read by Charles C. Abbott of Cambridge depicted the "average undergraduate" of Harvard from the time of his entrance, through the four years to the goal of the diploma. The class ode was read by John Caspar Dreier of Brooklyn, and the exercises were in charge of Prof. E. C. Moore.

Later in the day the tree exercises, a stadium fete, ivy oration, presentation of the class banner to the class of 1931 and a confetti battle, took their places in the program.

Tonight the senior glee club will render a vocal program from the steps of Widener library. Tomorrow the class will attend the Harvard-Yale baseball game. Graduation comes Thursday, and Friday the Phi Beta Kappa exercises in Sanders Theater.

Classes of '03 and '08 Have Their Reunions Today

The Harvard classes of '08 and '03 which are holding their annual reunions, were present in force today at Harvard class day.

The class of '08, holding its 20th anniversary, is making its headquarters at Hotel Preston, Swampscott, among the prominent members being John S. Richardson, Hoover campaign manager in Massachusetts; F. H. Van Orman, Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana; ex-Atty.-Gen. Jay R. Benton, Edward Dana, Manager of the Elevated; Robert A. Stranahan, president Champion Spark Plug Company, and John Eaton of S. S. Pierce & Co. Robert Guild, '06, was adopted by the class for the occasion.

Members of the '03 class, holding their 25th anniversary, are at the estate of Dudley Clark, former varsity football star, at Westwood.

CHICAGO POLICE STILL SEEK 7 FOR BOMBINGS

Chicago, June 19—Making its first definite move to bring to justice those charged with responsibility for the bombings, sluggings, kidnappings and murders that marked the primary election in Chicago, April 10, the law closed in on 12 men here.

Five of the 12 were placed under arrest and the others were the object of an intensive police hunt on indictments which charged variously assault with intent to murder, kidnapping and robbery.

Did Not Make Hop to Clear Mortgage, Says Hub Girl

Southampton, June 19—Before leaving Southampton for London today Miss Amelia Earhart, first woman to span the Atlantic in an airplane, exploded the myth that the flight was made to get money to "pay off the mortgage upon the family homestead."

"I am really upset by the report that the flight was made to clear off a mortgage," she said. "I never heard of anything so ridiculous. I made the trip as part of my June vacation. There was no other object in it."

ITALIAN PLANE FAILS TO FIND GEN. NOBILE

Rome, June 19 (AP)—Maj. Maddalena, Italian flier, made an unsuccessful reconnaissance in search for the Nobile party today and returned to Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, in his Savoia-Marchetti.

A message received from the Citta di Milano, base ship at Kings Bay, made public by the official news agency Stefani, said that Maddalena, who arrived in Kings Bay, Norway, last night, took off early today and flew past North Cape to the region in which Nobile and his five stranded companions are waiting for relief.

Just as the Norwegian fliers, Capt. Riiser-Larsen and Lieut. Luetzow Holm had failed in three previous attempts to sight the Nobile party, Maddalena also was unsuccessful in his search and returned to Kings Bay after a six-hour flight.

Now that visual efforts to find Gen. Nobile and his red tent pitched amidst the rough ice off Northeast Land have failed, an effort will be made to keep the S-55, which is equipped with radio, in touch with the Nobile party by means of wireless signals.

Nobile has been informed that during the next flight of the S-55 it will be necessary for him to use his own radio post to guide the big plane as soon as it comes into sight.

When Riiser-Larsen and Holm returned from their second unsuccessful reconnaissance yesterday they were informed Nobile had seen them at a distance of scarcely a mile and a half. The two men then took off in the same plane for a third attempt, hoping that between them they might see the Nobile party, but again they were unsuccessful and returned to their base ship, the Braganza.

MANCHESTER BOY DIES FROM AUTO INJURIES

Manchester, N. H. June 19—Michel Sakalay, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Sakalay of 262 Auburn st., died at the Sacred Heart Hospital of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile driven by John Pelleriz of Valley st.

The accident happened on Auburn st., near Union, the youngster being struck as he appeared suddenly in front of the car from behind a horse-drawn vehicle.

Roxbury Boy Injured

An automobile operated by Thomas O'Brien of Woodward st., South Boston, struck Paul McDowell, 4, of 43 Field st., Roxbury, while the boy was crossing Ruggles st., near Field st. The boy was taken to City Hospital, where he was treated for contusions and abrasions to the left elbow and head.

LIFE IS SAVED AS HORSE HEARS MASTER'S CRY

Death, riding on the rubber of a speeding automobile, nearly overtook Frederick J. Wright, 34, of Bertram st., a milk wagon driver, early today at South and Sedgewick sts., Jamaica Plain.

Wright's wagon, struck by a hit-and-run driver, was overturned and he was pinned beneath it. Milk bottles were flung far and wide to crash on the pavement and glass from some of the bottles cut the pinioned driver.

Had the horse bolted with the overturned wagon, Wright would have been ground to death, according to police, but the animal halted when he heard his master's voice crying for help.

Policemen Crehan, Wholey and McLaughlin, who were going on duty after roll call, rescued Wright and took him to Forest Hills Hospital where he was found to have escaped with bruises and lacerations.

Building inspectors are today looking over the house at 96 Marshall st., Brighton, where Mary I. Neary, 69-year-old woman, fell 35-feet when the piazza apparently collapsed.

She died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. At the hospital it was found that the woman had suffered a broken left leg, a fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

According to other tenants of the house the supports of the piazza gave way.

A Frigidaire
FOOD PRESERVATION SHOW

in our Assembly Hall, 9th floor, Annex

Tuesday, June 19 through Saturday, June 23

Open Tuesday evening until 9.30

Jordan Marsh Company invites you to visit this amazing exhibit, which has been arranged through the courtesy of Frigidaire Corporation, division of General Motors, for the people of Boston.

Food preservation is an age old problem originating with the arrival of man and continuing down through the centuries until the present day when people of this modern world are still struggling with the food preservation problem.

Food spoilage every year amounts to millions of dollars — every home is affected by it and it is a vital problem of every housewife. Mold growth on fruit develops — foods raw or cooked if not kept at preserving temperatures become filled with bacteria that is harmful to health and other food.

During the week of June 18 one of the most amazing educational displays of food preservation will be shown in Boston for the first time—this is your opportunity to learn about food preservation from its beginnings to its most perfected state. A motion picture, the first of its kind ever to be filmed, will reveal to you extraordinary conditions of improperly preserved food — microscopes will permit you to view live bacteria, food's strongest enemy — here you will see —here you will learn the value of properly refrigerated foods. Come, bring your friends, it's truly an educational display.

The research work on which this exhibit is based has been conducted in co-operation with the Food Technology Division of the Department of Biology and Public Health at the MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

A Story of Love and the French Revolution

WHAT HAS GONE ON BEFORE

SARDONICALLY stirring the villagers of Poussignot to height of frenzy for the French Revolution, the Citizen-Deputy Chauviniere shouts "Celibacy is an affront to nature!" He points out that to replace the aristocracy, it is the duty of free men to repopulate France. Swept by his fervor, the Revolutionary Committee passed a law compelling all unmarried men of 25 or over to appear before the Tribunal. Failure to get married means death. The ci-devant Vicomte de Corbal is one of those haled before the bar.

CHAPTER XIII

TO do honor to the court and the occasion, practising that ceremony in which he believed, Corbigny de Corbal had dressed himself with unusual care, in garments stored up for ceremonious occasions: a black coat with silver buttons, silk breeches and stockings and buckled shoes. His brown hair was gathered up and neatly tied in a black silk ribbon.

Very dignified and self-contained, he stood in the crowded chamber of justice to hear himself admonished. When it was done he bowed gravely to the members of the tribunal and would have withdrawn without uttering a word if Chauviniere had not intervened to add something of his own to the president's formal speech.

"The citizen ci-devant, Vicomte de Corbal," said he in the soft accents of an advocate for the defense, "belongs by birth to a class which the republic has abolished. Himself he has gone unscathed because of the republican spirit by which he is believed to be inspired, because of the sentiments of liberty, equality and fraternity, by the application of which he has rendered himself beloved. But the time is at hand when the mere appearance of republicanism may not suffice to efface the stigma of aristocratic birth, and he should perceive that he is now provided with an opportunity of placing his republicanism beyond all possibility of future question."

Chauviniere paused deliberately. An utter stillness reigned in that crowded chamber. He considered the impassive countenance of Monsieur de Corbal and anticipated with secret amusement the ruffling of that impassivity. He resumed:

"Acquainted as I am with his house and in which I have had the honor to be entertained, I am fortunately in a position to advise him, to point out to him that he need not be embarrassed by any difficulties of making choice, since a bride lies ready to his hand. I permit myself this indication because so often we overlook that which stands nearest, and I would not have the ci-devant vicomte suffer from any such oversight. A girl of the people, who is among those who serve him should prove domestically a very suitable wife. Therefore, this court counsels him not only to marry, but to marry Filomene Paulard, the lovely maid-servant at his chateau, thus not only fulfilling the requirements of your new enactment, but also affording an abiding proof of his acceptance of the religion of equality—a religion in which France will tolerate no heretics."

The riff-raff largely composing the audience hailed the proposal uproariously as worthy of Solomon. When that uproar died down, Monsieur de Corbal at last spoke. A scarlet flush had overspread his long and rather melancholy countenance. But his voice remained calm and steady.

"You know . . ." He half-turned, so as to include the entire assembly. "You all know my habits of life and of thought, and the simple creed by which I have governed my existence. I believe in communism, and I have given proofs of that belief. The nation is above the individual, and I recognize the na-

WINIFRED BLACK SEES REAL AMERICAN

SPIRIT OF THE NATION IS FOUND IN AUTO ROVER

Following is fifth installment of Winifred Black's series, "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

By WINIFRED BLACK

(Copyright, 1928, by Examiner Printing Company. Distributed by King Features Syndicate).

El Paso, Tex., June 18—We saw them every once in a while, all along the way through Arizona—the lonely, wind-swept graves in the desert.

Graves of white men and white women and once in a while the grave of a little white child—they marked the windings of the old Apache trail.

In the near distance rose Superstition Mountain, a strange thing like an apparition or like something cut out of pasteboard and painted weird colors for a stage set in a desert play. From the top of that mountain old Geronimo used to watch the dust in the desert and send his braves crawling through the sparse sage brush, flat on their stomachs, to spring up and surprise the white men who dared to invade his territory.

The Apache was the most cruel and the most crafty of all the American Indians. He never killed outright, if he could help it. He tortured women and children as a cat tortures a mouse and when old Geronimo could surprise a camp of unsuspecting sleepers his fierce delight sang in his heart like a wild war song.

Who are they, that lie so still in their little graves there in the desert? Old Geronimo could have told you but he died in the military prison down in Florida not so many years ago.

Some of his braves, younger than he, probably know—but they will never tell.

Some of them are sending their children to the Indian schools now and for some queer reason or other, the Indian boys and girls who go to the Indian schools do not like to hear of the Indian massacres and of what old Geronimo and his band considered the glorious days of Indian courage and Indian defiance.

ALL ARE TANNED

Sand and sage brush and wind and beating sun, little cavalcades of queer travel-stained cars—campers, men looking for work, young fellows, six or eight of them crowded into a two-passenger roadster—they knew about the silver lining, too, and were telling the desert winds about it, and about the melancholy

HUBBY AND $2500 RING VANISH

The strange disappearance of Myron Morris, 32, of Wadsworth ave., New York, a former Bostonian, from a Boston hotel, was reported to police today more than 24 hours after the man walked out of the hotel wearing a $2500 diamond ring and with $150 in cash.

Mrs. Myron Morris, wife of the missing man, told police the ring was hers but that her husband had borrowed it.

He had come to Boston, she said, in connection with an offer of an instructorship, her husband, a [illegible], received from Boston University.

The wife insisted that no quarrel had preceded Morris' leaving the hotel to visit a Boston bank. She said they had been married ten months and in that time had not quarreled once.

The wife declared her fear to police that Morris has met with foul play. Since he left the hotel he telephoned once. That was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PROFIT IN $76 STAMP EXPENSE

Use of airmail for rapid shipment of merchandise was demonstrated by a Boston fishing concern which paid $76 postage on a small gear rather than have a trawler tied up for several days.

The gear, itself worth only $38, arrived by plane from Chicago, via New York, less than 48 hours after it left a factory in Beloit, Wis. The package was plastered with 76 one-dollar stamps.

When the trawler Colleen docked Friday, the owners, O'Hara Brothers, set out to rush repairs on a broken [illegible] gear. It was found that all needed parts except one small gear could be quickly procured here.

A telegram was sent to Beloit, Wis., ordering the missing part. The shipment left Beloit Saturday morning, left Chicago by plane Saturday night and arrived in Boston Sunday night, being delivered to the company early Monday.

I had supposed, of course, that everything was arranged for "Ballyhoo" as the next Shearer "opera." But [illegible] appears you cannot blame Norma nor her producer husband, Irving Thalberg, for grabbing [illegible] "The Little Angel" [illegible] Miss Shearer's talents. Sam Woods will direct.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" IS HIT AT ORPHEUM

By LEO GAFFNEY

George McManus' world famous rollicking [illegible], "Bringing Up Father," culled from the newspaper comic strips, is now in film.

On the Orpheum screen you will find Jiggs, Maggie, Dinty and all the rest of the familiar characters engaged in a series of adventures that look just the same as the Sunday supplements.

In the droll person of J. Farrell MacDonald the redoubtable Jiggs comes to life with his keen appetite for corned beef and for the easy conviviality of Dinty Moore's place. That terrible tyrant, Maggie, is impersonated by no less than Polly Moran. Dinty is Jules Cowles; Mrs. Dinty is Marie Dressler in her most bristling manner, and Gertrude Olmstead, of the starry eyes and frizzy hair, is Ellen, thus comprising the rest of "the immediate family."

"Bringing Up Father" on the screen so closely follows the same thing on the printed page that the effect is startling. Not content with the severity of the rolling pin, the punitive Maggie goes so far as to lap the defenseless Jiggs over the head with a claw hammer.

Immediately following this master stroke, Director Jack Conway fades into a beautiful sylvan bower. The little birdies sing, the ground is covered with snow-white blossoms, and there is Jiggs—in his nightshirt, gamboling [illegible] about with a woodnymph. Near convulsions in the audience!

For the rest of the piece, one panicky scene treads close upon the heels of another, until the spectators are [illegible] out from laughter. When the dowdy Mrs. Jiggs attempts to entertain Ellen's "swell" friends, and when Uncle Dinty, acting as butler at the party, attempts to introduce the guests—most supreme consternation!

The acting honors go to Polly Moran, Marie Dressler and Tenen Holtz, the latter as a forlorn little pants presser who is [illegible] termagant wife [illegible] is spared to the [illegible].

It [illegible] like the "funnies" don't [illegible] "Bringing Up Father." It is the [illegible] of the knockabout drama.

Stop Kissing if You Don't Want Pyorrhea, Says Doctor

New York, June 19 (AP)—The kiss as a cause for the spread of pyorrhea is the theory advanced by a hygiene expert.

Dr. Hermann Becks, professor of dental hygiene of the University of Freiburg, Germany, who arrived on the liner Berlin, said while he believes an affection of the stomach may be the original seat of the disease, it is spread through the medium of kisses. Dr. Becks said he came to this country at the invitation of the University of California to continue his research work.

ROMANTIC FILM ON TWIN BILLS

A novel and highly romantic drama of the picture studios, "Clothes Make the Woman," is the feature this week at the Modern and Beacon Theaters. Starting with the dark days of the Russian Revolution in 1918, the story carries the Royal Princess Anastasia through an exciting series of events which culminate in a dramatic episode in Hollywood.

Eve Southern is convincing in the role of the princess. She is ably seconded by Walter Pidgeon. Others who contribute worth while characterizations are Corliss Palmer, Adolph Milar, Charles Byer and Catherine Wallace.

On the same program is a sprightly farce, "Slightly Used," with May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel. Telling the story of a girl who invents a fictitious husband only to have him turn up after she has fallen in love with someone else, this gay film creates many laughs. Assisting the stars are Audrey Ferris, Robert Agnew, Anders Randolf and Eugenie Besserer.

NOVARRO STARS IN SEA FILM AT STATE

The lure of the sea, and the heroism of mariners battling the elements, form the background for an exciting drama of adventure in "Across to Singapore," Ramon Novarro's starring photoplay at Loew's State. Novarro plays the sailor hero whose love quest leads him over the Pacific, through storms, mutiny, attacks of Oriental pirates and many other [illegible] affairs. These form a thundering background for the inevitable love story.

Ramon Novarro

Joan Crawford plays the heroine, a New England girl, thrust into the midst of an adventure in the Orient. Ernest Torrence, as the hero's older brother, dominates a number of powerful scenes and James Mason as the sinister first mate is a convincing player. Anna May Wong, Frank Currier and others assist.

The Singapore scenes are spectacular, and the New England village is a realistic and elaborate setting for the opening bits of the play. The story, adapted from Ben Ames Williams' novel, "All the Brothers Were Valiant," is a stirring romance of the sea. William Nigh directed.

The State stage attractions include Howard Emerson and his recording orchestra, and Bob "Uke" Henshaw, ukulele expert.

SHIPSTEAD GETS THE VOTES IN MINNESOTA

St. Paul, Minn., June 19 (AP)—United States Senator Henrik Shipstead, Farmer-Labor, was renominated by a wide margin in the state primary.

Governor Christianson's renomination on the Republican ticket was on a basis of more than 2 to 1 over George T. Simpson.

So Temperamental!

New York— Because of a difference of opinions as to the size of type for their names in ads W. C. Fields and Moran and Mack have split up. The manager says that temperament caused a tour to end in St. Joseph, Mo., and that various audiences in Kansas missed the fun they had paid for.

Eating for Health

WHAT is health? It means that your body is performing all its functions in the way that nature intended.

Each organ of the body was designed to perform a certain definite work and nature will not stand any shirking. She recognizes no eight-hour law when it comes to the work that must be done by each organ of the human body.

All of which means that health is largely a matter of nutrition, and this brings us right up to the question of food and its relation to health.

Some foods contain only fat making material; others are purely muscle makers and others make only bone and teeth. A perfect food is one that contains all these elements in exactly the right proportions to build a perfect human body and supply all the energy we need to do a day's work.

Nature has supplied such a food in the whole wheat grain. It contains everything that the human body needs to build tissue, muscle, bone and brain.

Raw wheat, however, is not a suitable food for the human being, so scientists have perfected a shredded wheat biscuit which offers whole wheat grain made digestible for the human stomach. These whole wheat biscuits are delicious served as a cereal food, or in a score of delicious ways in connection with fruit, vegetables, etc.

Today we have illustrated for you a delicious dessert of bananas combined with shredded wheat biscuits.

To prepare this dessert for the average family requires six shredded wheat biscuits, four bananas, one pint of milk, one quarter cup fine granulated sugar, one cup of cream whipped, two tablespoons powdered sugar. Peel and slice the bananas with a silver knife, cover with the granulated sugar, set in a cool place.

Prepare the biscuit by dipping in the milk, drain off all milk possible, place on serving plates. Split and fill the shredded wheat biscuit with the prepared bananas, putting the top half back.

Put layers of bananas on top of the biscuits, cover with whipped cream sweetened with powdered sugar and decorate with little cubes of bright jelly.

Sliced bananas may also be served in the biscuit baskets with milk or cream.

Or, if preferred, the sliced bananas can simply be placed on top of the biscuits and served with milk or cream and sugar as before, but this gives more the effect of the breakfast dish, whereas the whipped cream really brings this healthful, delicious combination into the kingdom of desserts.

Enroll Now for Next Fall's Class

With the graduation of the second class in the Martha Lee School of Cookery, the lessons will be discontinued for the summer months.

However, the third class will commence early in September, and if you want to be sure of being included in the 200 ladies who will be registered in this class we would suggest sending in your name now for later enrollment.

Graduate Thursday

MEMBERS of the Martha Lee School of Cookery and followers of Martha Lee's articles in this paper and the Boston Sunday Advertiser are cordially invited to the graduating exercises to be held in the Martha Lee Kitchen Thursday, June 21, at 2:30 p. m.

Dr. P. H. Mullowney, director of the Hearst Health Laboratory, will address the class, followed by a talk by Miss Marguerite J. Gibbons, sales service representative of the Fleischmann Company.

Miss Gibbons has been cooperating with our local bakers in perfecting new sweet dough products. There are now many delightful varieties of these sweet goods on sale in the city and Miss Gibbons will display some of the more popular ones and suggest to you the various uses to which these products can be put.

This will be one of the added attractions to an all-around interesting program, which includes the making and serving of chop suey and other refreshments, the awarding of the diplomas and certain surprise features at which we can only hint here.

Twenty dollars in gold will be awarded for the best letters on the benefits received from the school, $5 for the first prize, $3 for the second prize, $2 for the third prize and ten prizes of $1 each.

Letters are limited to 300 words and should be written on one side of the page. They must be mailed to Martha Lee by today. Address to Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

Guava Jelly Is Good With Toasted Crackers

When it comes to jellies, while I am perfectly willing to give grape and currant their just dues, my real favorite is guava jelly. It certainly does add zest to any meal, especially to broiled meat, chicken, game, or roast.

Try it too with toasted crackers and cream cheese for evening refreshments or afternoon tea. And sure [illegible] the children's [illegible] added [illegible] and [illegible] favorite [illegible].

Pepper Cocktail Is Well Worth Trying

Green Pepper Cocktail—Cut off the stem ends from good-sized sweet green peppers and scoop out the seeds. Place the shells in ice water while you prepare the filling. Remove the skins from ripe tomatoes, cut out the soft and seedy part, then cut in small pieces the firm, red flesh.

Mix with an equal volume of broiled oysters, cooled and cut up—or broiled mushrooms may be substituted—season with a few drops of Worcestershire [illegible] catsup, a little salt, celery seeds, lemon juice and, if you have it, a little Chinese [illegible].

Fill grapefruit serving plate half full with fine shaved ice. Make a nest for the peppers in the center, [illegible] them. Fill the [illegible] with the cocktail mixture and garnish with a little [illegible].

Chipso

"Chipso is like a maid at dishwashing time. I put the china in the Chipso-suds while I'm drying the glass and silver. Then when I'm ready for the dishes, they're ready to rinse! I soak my pots and pans, too—and save my hands"
Mrs. A. R.—Lowell, Mass.

"Since I have used Chipso to soak my clothes clean, I never boil my wash any more. A half-hour or so of soaking gets the dirt so loose I can squeeze it out. Then a bit of rubbing on shirt bands and cuffs—and I'm ready to rinse"
Mrs. M. B.—Chicago

Why keep 2 boxes of Chipso ?

For the same reason you keep a broom upstairs and another downstairs—to save steps!

As thrifty a way of saving steps as we know is to keep two boxes of Chipso working for you, one at the kitchen sink, and the other by the washtub or washing machine!

This doubling-up of boxes doesn't mean using a single Chipso flake more. Yet when you want to soak clothes clean—or get through dishes 1/3 quicker, the white, work-saving flakes are on the spot, right where you can reach them.

The 25c box is so big you can dip your cup in—for a tubful of instant suds! And with same sized box on your kitchen shelf you will have enough Chipso for a month of dishwashings!

If you have depended upon Chipso suds to escape the rubbing and boiling of an old-time washday only, what a surprise a Chipso dishwashing will be! By soaking the grease off the dishes, Chipso suds saves your hands! Practically all you do is just rinse and wipe.

Mello-Murphy Pry Off Ring Lid at Fenway Park

CHAMPION IS SLIGHT CHOICE

Fuller, Allen, Nichols and Corbett to Be Guests at N. E. Title Match

By JACK CONWAY

THE boxing lid will be blasted off at Fenway Park on Thursday night when Al Mello will defend his title as New England welterweight champion against the furious attacks of Billy Murphy over the 10-round route. The show will be staged under the direction of the Arena A. C.

The opening show at Fenway Park will have all the setting and color that goes with such events.

Jack Conway

Gov. Fuller, Lieut. Gov. Allen, Mayor Nichols and Mayor Corbett of Lowell will be the guests of [illegible] and will occupy ringside boxes.

A special grandstand section has been set aside for [illegible] and [illegible] that several [illegible] will attend the bout.

Col. Bob McKirdy announces that the ring will be pitched over home plate, which will give the 19,000 persons in grandstand seats a clear view of the tussle.

There will be 4000 seats on a flooring which will surround the ring, while there will be many more thousands of seats in the first base pavilion.

The Arena Club announces it has installed the same kind of lights over the ring which have made Tex Rickard's big shows in New York so successful from a spectators' viewpoint.

WHILE McKirdy is furnishing the color for the opening of the Red Sox park to boxing, Mello and Murphy are finishing up their training. Murphy will end his strenuous training at his camp outside of Lowell today. He has been boxing with Tommy Lannon of Revere, Tommy Doyle of Salem and Laddie Lee of Cambridge.

The challenger weighs 147 pounds and will be strong at the championship weight.

Mello will knock off work at Gus Wilson's camp at Orangeburg, N. Y., today. He will return to Boston tomorrow and will rest up until he steps forth in defense of his championship on Thursday night.

Early betting makes Mello a slight favorite. While the bulk of the public is stringing along with the champion, persons in close touch with the fistic racket like Murphy's chances. They figure that as Billy was good enough to win over Honeyboy Finnegan as a featherweight, beat Johnny Indrisano as a lightweight and conquer Meyer Cohen and Jack Zivic as a welterweight that he should be fit to take Mello's measure.

THE opening of the Red Sox park to boxing, with a title bout as a feature, has caused a rush for reservations at the Arena Club's office at 338 Washington st. Col. McKirdy predicts a crowd of 15,000, with a gate running close to $25,000.

PETE PACHECO, rugged Ute Indian from Denver, has been signed to box Charlie Donovan of Dorchester, one of Mello' challengers, in the eight-round semifinal bout. Three weeks ago, Pacheco, in his local debut, fought Donovan right down to the finish line. Donovan received the decision after a sensational battle, and with a storm of boohs.

Col. Bob McKirdy has also signed two [illegible]. One of them will bring together [illegible] of South Boston who never fails to provide thrills, and Murray Layton, capable New York featherweight who nosed him out of a decision a few months ago in the Arena.

In another, a rubber match, clever little Jimmy Connolly of Brockton will be paired with Connie Holmes, dusky featherweight from the South End. They have fought two blistering battles, with Connolly winning the first and Holmes the second.

A six-rounder, between Hy Diamond of the West End and Battling Sandrelli of the North End, and a four-rounder between Frankie O'Day of Woonsocket and Ray Cross of Milford will complete the card.

BILL BINGHAM ANNOUNCES H. A. A. CHANGE

William J. Bingham, athletic director of Harvard University, has announced that a change will be made in the financial and accounting department of the Harvard A. A.

The most important of the alterations in the department is the abolishment of the office of graduate treasurer. This position has been occupied for almost 30 years by Henry Thompson, William F. Garcelon, and the late Major Fred W. Moore.

Mr. Thompson, graduate treasurer during the years around 1900, and who returned to the office a year ago after the death of Major Moore, will resign his post.

The college bursar's office in Lehman Hall in Harvard Yard is to handle all financial and accounting business of the A. A. This move will relieve that department of a great burden of detail work.

Howard Parker, [illegible] of Belmont, who succeeded as business manager of the A. A. in arranging, with Mr. Bingham, the new plan of the financial end of athletics, will remain with the department until after the coming football season, in order to get the new plan operating smoothly.

Wallace C. Sprague, Arthur E. Oschwald and Charles Hart are the remaining trio who will resign from active duty with the Harvard A. A.

SEVEN CREWS ON HUDSON TODAY

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 19—This afternoon seven sleek shells will strain along the four-mile course laid out for the 1928 intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson.

At least 100,000 spectators will watch the classic struggle from the banks of the river. Advance dope has it that the best contest will be between the championship Columbia eight and the brawny crew from California, Pacific Coast titlists for the past two years.

During the last few days, however, there has been a marked improvement in the rowing of the Washington crew. So that eight instantly became a potent factor in the pre-race talk.

The weather is threatening this morning, and there is a chance that the storm conditions may prove the deciding point in the result of the race. The Golden Bears are a heavy, powerful boatload, and in the event of bad going will find their power stroke a great standby.

Rusty Callow's Pennsylvania eight is the best choice among the dark horses. The Navy, too, has a good chance to be right up there in the fighting.

The Navy and Cornell have a lot of potential power stored up and if either of the latter pair can hit their stride, may spring a surprise. The race is sure to be a wonder with all the eights so evenly matched.

GAINES WINS IN ARGONNE SHOW

Larry Gaines, light-heavy champion of Canada, annexed the decision over Jack Gagnon of New Bedford in one of the poorest bouts seen here in recent months.

Gagnon showed few signs of real fighting ability in the initial eight rounds of the bout. He held on and slowed things.

In the concluding two stanzas of the main bout Gagnon went after the colored boxer with a wild barrage of rights and lefts. He might have gotten the decision had he speeded up at an earlier hour.

In the semi-final Joe Accetta of Providence, light-heavy title holder in the smallest State, got a ten-round decision over Mickey Chaplin of Scranton.

Tiger Star to Coach Baltimore School

Princeton, N. J., June 19—Jake Slagle of Baltimore, famed halfback of Princeton, announced that at the end of the present college year he will resign as assistant to the Princeton dean and take up his duties as assistant football coach at Gilman school, Baltimore, which he attended before he went to Princeton.

Slagle was appointed assistant to the dean shortly after his graduation last June.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON walked into Paul Bowser's office as Gus Sonnenberg, former Dartmouth All-American tackle, was in the act of signing a contract which calls for him to receive a guarantee of $7500 for his world's heavyweight wrestling championship bout with Strangler Lewis, which will be staged by Paul Bowser at the Arena on June 29.

"You look happy," laughed Mr. Boston as he extended a hand to the youthful mat sensation. "Why all the merriment?"

"Take a peek at this contract," said Sonnenberg as he pointed to the document he had just signed.

Mr. Boston did. One clause read:

"In consideration of Gus Sonnenberg of Providence meeting Strangler Ed Lewis in a finish bout for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship at the New Boston Arena on June 29 under the promotion of Paul Bowser, he shall receive a guarantee of $7500 for his services."

"Wow!" exclaimed Mr. Boston.

"That's just how I feel," piped Sonnenberg. "When I played football at Dartmouth, I often received twice as much punishment in a tough game as I do in a mat bout. And in those days I was paid off with glory and liked it. Funny the kick one gets out of playing in a big college football game. To tell you the truth, I'd rather be in the Dartmouth lineup in a game against Harvard in which I would only receive bumps and bruises for compensation than to get $7500 out of a world's heavyweight championship mat contest. Guess love for football is in my blood.

"I must confess, though, I never got the same kick out of playing pro football that I did out of the amateur game."

"HOW does the wrestling racket hit you?" pressed Mr. Boston.

"Great," shot back Sonnenberg. "I am going to become the world's champion. I've got my heart and soul into it. I've won 37 or 38 bouts and figure I'm now ready to tip over the champion."

"What is the chief reason for your long run of victories?" asked Mr. Boston.

"Aggressiveness," was the quick reply. "I keep after these big grapplers like I used to go after college football rivals. I don't give them a chance to use their experience and skill. I rough them up and knock them out of the picture with one of my flying tackles.

"I got along fairly well even before I mastered any of the fine points of wrestling. I have always felt that cleverness was not worth much to an opponent if I rushed him. That's why Dempsey was so successful as a fighter.

"I have also been mastering the fine points of the mat game. When my aggressiveness is backed up by a little science, I figure I shall win my matches even more quickly than I have been doing in the past."

MR. BOSTON asked Dynamite how he felt in regard to his coming clash with Lewis.

"I'll beat him like I have the rest," said Sonny with the confidence of youth. "The Strangler is getting along in years and cannot expect to keep winning forever. I have felt that he has had most of his opponents frightened before the bouts have even started. You can bet everything you have that Lewis' reputation won't worry me. I look upon the coming tussle as merely another bout. I'll hand the champion the same kind of treatment I gave to the rest."

"How much money have you made since you took up wrestling?" queried Mr. Boston.

"At first I only got a few hundred dollars for my services," said Gus, "but as I kept winning the size of my purses increased. I got $3000 the night I licked Frieberg which was my biggest money shot. I have averaged around $1000 a bout which has netted me close to $40,000 so far. The $7500 I am to receive for my clash with Lewis is the big money shot of my career. It is more than most college professors receive for a year's services."

"Would you rather be a college professor than a wrestler?" Mr. Boston asked.

"I'm satisfied with being a wrestler," laughed Sonny, "especially when there is a fellow like Paul Bowser who is willing to pay me $7500 for one night's work."

"Apparently a good physique is worth more than a flock of college degrees," chirped Mr. Boston.

"Dempsey, Ruth and Lewis found that out a long time ago," volunteered Bowser.

HARVARD CREW IMPROVES ON THAMES

Red Top, Conn., June 19—The Harvard and Yale crews continued today their schedule of training for their races on Thursday and Friday.

The Yale varsity and junior varsity went out together. On a slow stroke the junior varsity drew away, but when the stroke was raised to racing pace the varsity left the junior behind.

There were no changes in the Harvard crews today, and it is thought that none will be made unless an accident happens.

The Harvard varsity crew rowed better today. The rest on Sunday seemed to be just what the eight needed. Today they recovered their long, powerful swing. The shell slid through the water more smoothly than a few days ago.

Brown took the varsity in short stretches to the railroad bridge, and sent it up the course. No attempt at speed was made. Watts kept the stroke at 32 until about 200 yards from the finish when he increased the beat to 38.

Yale intends to sprint at the start of the four-mile race and to get so far ahead that the heavy Harvard eight cannot come up.

The Yale varsity eight is very fast. No other crew seen here in recent years could get away so quickly and keep up a high racing stroke for such a long time.

"Big" Ed Walsh's Boy Joins White Sox

Chicago, June 19 (AP)—Once more the megaphone man will announce the name of "Big Ed" Walsh as the day's pitching hope of the White Sox.

Not the "Big Ed" of more than a decade ago, but his son, who is almost as large and who the Sox hope can get along in the majors as well as his father.

Young Walsh joined the White Sox yesterday and will appear in uniform at Cleveland today. He came fresh from a great season at Notre Dame, where he won seven games and lost one. He is 24 years old, stands six feet one inch and has pitched excellent ball for the Notre Dame team for three years.

STEINKE HERE FOR BOUT

Hans Steinke will arrive in Boston today for his bout with Dan Koloff. The bout takes place at Mechanics Building tomorrow night. Steinke, who is the biggest wrestler in the game, weighing 239 pounds and standing 6ft. 7in., though undefeated, is not taking his match with Koloff lightly.

The huge German is a mountain of strength.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, twice holder of the world's heavyweight title, will meet Henry Deglane in the semi-final bout. Although the elder Zbyszko has met the best in the game, Deglane feels that his youth and speed will pull him through a winner over the more famous of the Zybszkos.

Renarto Gardini, a former favorite of the patrons of the mat game in this city, will meet Giovanni Vargarini. George Hagen, navy and marine champion, will tackle Tom Lurich, Russian grappler, in the opening bout.

Walker and Hudkins Ready for Bout

Chicago, June 19 (AP)—Confident and in top form, Mickey Walker and his challenger, Ace Hudkins of Nebraska, had their final strenuous workouts before them today in preparation for their 10-round middleweight title match at Comiskey Park Thursday night.

Both will rest tomorrow, confining their training to light exercises.

Walker already is under the championship limit of 160 pounds, his trainer reported, while the Nebraska Wildcat, who for the first time in his career does not have to worry over making weight, is down to 154 pounds. They both engaged in fast and furious sparring workouts yesterday, Hudkins knocking out one of his mates, Dixie Kid, a Chicago negro light heavyweight, in less than a round.

Umpires—Devron and Finell.

New Haven, Conn., June 19—Showery weather conditions for the Yale-Harvard commencement baseball game were indicated this morning by threatening clouds.

In the event of possible postponement because of rain this afternoon, it was said that the teams will go to Cambridge for the game scheduled at Harvard's commencement match and will return here Thursday. Yale's commencement throng which is present here today will be [illegible] vanished by Thursday. [illegible] have made a [illegible] to play off [illegible] meeting in Cambridge on Saturday. They have [illegible] their third game to a professional diamond. Today's game is the 154th between the old rivals. Yale leads 79 to 73 matches. The [illegible] spent the night at the [illegible] school dormitory in Wallingford. The school closed last week and the Harvard squad found conditions ideal there. The athletic director is "Beau" Olcott, the former [illegible] center rush.

The Crimson squad planned to [illegible] Wallingford and lunch this [illegible] at the Hotel Taft, New Haven. [illegible] was still in [illegible] to start [illegible] Jack Barbee [illegible] Frank Cutts in reserve. [illegible] have baffled Yale by [illegible] in the box in the last four games played [illegible] a period of two years. "Smoky" Joe Wood [illegible] said this morning that he plans to start Jeff Sawyer, a [illegible] boy, in the box for Yale [illegible] Dudley Smith in reserve for Harvard tomorrow. [illegible] Lord will be sent against [illegible] in the relief role to [illegible] Sawyer falters. Wood believes that Sawyer's lame arm [illegible] during the Eastern trip, has recovered its [illegible].

Yale's batting averages are better than Harvard's [illegible] Harvard's fielding edge is pronounced. Bruce Caldwell, Johnny Garvey and Bill Hammersley, football [illegible], are relied upon to slug Yale into a victory.

Baseball critics here believe that [illegible] score will easily run into double figures for winner if not for the loser. Today's game will be the first commencement contest played since the new Yale pavilion was completed.

The alumni [illegible] formed a parade from the campus to Yale field. The younger classes wore [illegible] togs of gay colors and carried a wide variety of signs and placards. More than 20 brass bands were in the procession. The classes planned to parade around the diamond during the final practice of the nines.

SMALL CROWD CALLS OFF SEAVIEW A. C. BOUTS

Salisbury Beach, June 19—The bouts scheduled for the Seaview A. C. here last night again proved a [illegible] and [illegible] were turned away from the doors of the auditorium. The promoter, Charlie Mealey, explained that the size of the crowd did not warrant holding the scheduled fights, and rather than lose money again the club officials decided to call the whole show off.

OLYMPIC COAST STARS START FOR EAST

San Francisco, June 19 (AP)—Seven California candidates for places on the American Olympic team turned their faces eastward today, headed for Boston, where they will participate in the final tryouts.

The contingent includes five women swimmers from northern California and two athletes from southern California.

The women are Eleanor Garatti, candidate for the 100-meter swim honors; Marion Gilman, who is expected to figure in the 100-yard backstroke event; Monta Morgan, who plans to enter the 200-meter or 400-meter event, or both; Helen Zibraskow [illegible] breaststroke expected, and "Bunny" Fergis, whose specialty is diving.

The two candidates are Charles Borah, University of Southern California sprinter, and Lee Barnes, also of U. S. C., who holds the world's pole vault record.

Borah decided to enter the tryouts in spite of an injured muscle in his thigh which prevented him from appearing in Southern California recently. Borah and Barnes expect to train at Philadelphia for two weeks.

Word was received from San Jose, Cal., that Miss Margaret Jenkins, holder of the world's javelin record for women, would enter the national track meet and Olympic tryouts at Newark, N. J. Miss Jenkins, who also holds the national title for the baseball throw, plans to enter the discus event at Newark.

Round the Links With BOBBY JONES

By BOBBY JONES
National Amateur Champion

I HAVE just finished reading a dissertation upon instruction methods. The chief point made by the author is that it is a mistake to discourage the pupil by telling him of the difficulties of the game. The writer points out that golf is no more difficult than any other game, hence the pupil should be led to approach confidently, rather than with fear and trembling, the task in hand.

I quite agree that the difficulty of merely hitting a golf ball has been exaggerated. I agree also that a person with a natural sense of rhythm can in a very short while acquire the ability to drive quite a good distance and to play passably well on occasions.

But after all [illegible] What we all want to do is to play well today, tomorrow and [illegible]. An occasional good [illegible] one. I cannot agree that [illegible] in golf is easy of attainment.

It seems to me that about every two or three weeks I have to [illegible] out some kink in my swing that has arisen when [illegible] every thing was going [illegible] as possible. So often [illegible] trouble. I [illegible] corrected a few months or weeks before, and [illegible] just as [illegible] to find the fault [illegible]. I marked [illegible] that it seemed I had to learn the same thing [illegible] times a year and would forget it five times in the same period.

I SUPPOSE the most subtle part of the golf stroke—the hardest to keep an eye upon—is the body action, with relation to which the arms must swing. Too many players, I think, are inclined to use the arms almost exclusively, omitting or restricting the turn of shoulders and hips. It all comes down to timing, or rhythm, or tenseness, or whatever you choose to call it. There cannot be any freedom or power in the swing that works around a stationary body.

That is one reason why I favor taking the club back close to the ground, dragging it back in the manner many have described. If the club is swung back in this way it is necessary that the body turn away from the ball in order to make way for the hands to pass. That does not mean that the swing is flat but merely that there will be [illegible]

[illegible]

THE last is exactly the trouble [illegible] descended upon me last week [illegible] to be [illegible] progressing [illegible] changes [illegible] I felt I was [illegible] I began to be [illegible] when I started to hook every shot.

[illegible] however, I found that I was taking [illegible] so that [illegible] caused an outstanding hook.

The best advice anyone can give to a golfer is to [illegible] the tenseness of [illegible]. A failure to turn or pivot is caused only by a rigidity in the muscles of the body which will not allow it to follow the natural course.

Braves Have 7 Games in Next 4 Days

By NICK FLATLEY

THE Braves, having lived through the blistering invasion of the Western half of their league, now proceed to entertain a couple of Eastern members for the rest of the week. The shift in enemy location will not mean any rest for the weary Tribe, however. The Giants open tomorrow, today's game having been postponed because of rain, and will be followed in by the Dodgers.

Both these clubs are tangled up in the wildest race the National League has known in years and both naturally consider the Braves soft picking. The McGraws present a real pennant threat, while the Brooklyn team is tough because Robby has one of his chronic dependable pitching staffs.

Chef Gives Rules for Dishes

AS promised, here are the recipes for the dishes prepared Wednesday in the Martha Lee Kitchen by Mr. John Alexander, salad chef of the New Ocean House at Swampscott.

Martha Lee.

First, Mr. Alexander prepared a delicious combination of pineapple and cottage cheese.

Pineapple and cottage cheese salad: To ½ to ¾ lb. of cheese add 1 tbsp. French dressing which is made with ½ tsp. dry mustard, dash of pepper, dash of paprika, 1 tsp. salt, added to 1 pt. vinegar and 3 parts olive oil well shaken together. When this liquid is mixed add 1 tsp. cottage cheese, mix and blend together to bind into smooth paste before adding to the larger quantity of cheese.

Make a nest of a few lettuce leaves filled in with shredded lettuce on which is placed a slice of pineapple. Top this with a scoop or ball of the blended cheese. Decorate with radish rose, beet points or top with celery.

The radish roses, which form such an attractive decoration for endless dishes, are easily made by following Mr. Alexander's directions: Cut off the radish top, leaving about an inch of the green stem and remove the tiniest bit off the root end. Then cut a small slice from one side and discard.

Directly above that cut another slice down to the stem end but do not separate it from the main radish root. Repeat this three times, encircling the radish with the four petals. It is very effective and easy to do.

More elaborate roses are made by cutting sections of three petals each and allowing them to open in ice water into real rose form.

Mr. Alexander's next dish was:

Neptune Salad—Scald and peel whole tomatoes of uniform size (those which are about 8 to the pound). Cut a thin slice off the top and with sharp pointed knife scoop out the centers. Fill cavity with fresh crab flakes mixed with French dressing. Decorate with mayonnaise which has been pressed through a waxed paper tube.

Lobster Delice proved as easy to look at as it was to eat.

Lobster Delice—Dice the meat of a freshly cooked live lobster. Arrange nests of hearts of lettuce leaves and in center place a paper cup. Fill cups with lobster dice mixed with a dressing made as follows: Thousand Island Dressing, 3 parts mayonnaise, 1 part chili sauce, a little lemon juice, a dash of Worcestershire sauce, to which may be added finely chopped parsley, red and green peppers, celery for color. Lay sprays of watercress between lettuce leaves.

Last of all Mr. Alexander prepared what we thought was his piece de resistance, a Poinsettia Salad. This salad was so easy that the most amateur housewife can readily achieve it, yet beautiful enough to deserve a special medal.

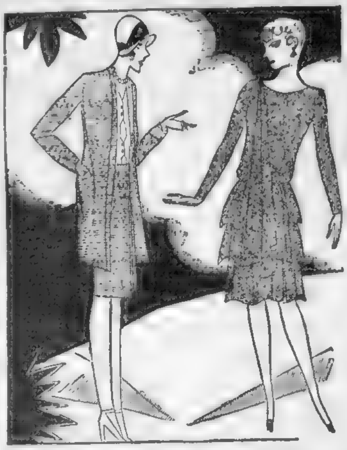
Poinsettia Salad—Scald and peel tomatoes. Take tomato on fork, stem end down and starting at top cut into four quarters toward the bottom, then cut eat section making eight divisions. Put knife in at top and carefully go around cutting points from center without breaking the outside. Hold under the cold running water and it opens into a large flower with eight even petals. Lay on lettuce bed and garnish center with a heart of mayonnaise on which are put little stamins made of asparagus buds.

Salads should be placed in the ice box after being made as they should be served cold with lettuce very crisp.

Remember, another chef day next Wednesday, June 20, at 2:30 p. m.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Honeymoon Wardrobe—



To have enough clothes to suit every occasion and yet have them all pack into little space is the ideal condition for the honeymoon wardrobe. Perfect for traveling is the knit ensemble (left) with the modish collarless line and the straight three-quarter coat. Afternoon requires a more formal frock, and this one of cire lace (at right) is practical and charming. It can be packed without crushing.

Dr. Reed Warns of Carbon Monoxide Peril

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

THE newspapers constantly record the accidental deaths of motorists who have been running their engines in small enclosed garages, and from time to time somebody gets "gassed" in a bath and is either in danger of death or actually dead by the time anyone discovers their fate.

Recent work by J. B. S. Haldane has shown that there is some special action of carbon monoxide gas on the brain. We know that it kills by combining with those cells of blood which ought to pick up oxygen from the air to carry to the tissues of the body for their life processes. In this way it prevents those cells from combining with oxygen, and so starves the cells they supply of this essential constituent.

But Dr. Haldane's experiments have shown that this is not all. He found that rats could live on the oxygen dissolved in their blood if they were first kept in high-pressure chambers for a time, so that the oxygen was dissolved in excessive quantities at high pressure. Then they could live, even if almost all their oxygen-carrying cells were subsequently combined with the useless carbon monoxide.

But if they then breathed an excess of carbon monoxide, more than could enter into combination with their blood cells, they began to pant, and soon had convulsions and died. So there is some definite positive poisoning action as well as the passive prevention of oxygen supply. If this poison action picks out brain tissue especially, it would account for the curious disinclination to attempt to save themselves which people gassed with monoxide often disconcertingly manifest. If they survive they can often remember afterward how they saw that gas was escaping and did not bother to make the effort to turn it off, or to open the door and seek fresh air. Dr. Haldane thinks that there is some substance in the brain which is especially sensitive to carbon monoxide. An investigator named Keilin showed that there was some substance like this in the muscles. With the brain and muscles swiftly paralyzed there is a peculiar danger in any escape or production of carbon monoxide in places where a person is likely to be left alone and undisturbed for some time.

Inquests have shown that gas appliances of poor design, or even very good ones under bad conditions, may burn with imperfect oxidation and so form this dangerous gas. The danger, potentially present in all water-heating devices, such as geysers, can never be overcome with certainty by any mechanical device, so far as is at present shown. The very small bathrooms now provided in apartment houses certainly add to the danger.

Three-Minute Trips

By TEMPLE MANNING

THERE are but three Mohammedan temples in all of China. One of these, the sacred "Bottle" of Cathay, is extremely interesting. It is, as its name implies, built in the shape of a bottle. Very few non-Mohammedans have ever been vouchsafed the honor of being permitted to view its interior but we have it from one of the privileged that it is indeed a remarkable place.

The walls are decorated with frescoes illustrating the Mohammedan traditions, the ceilings are beautifully decorated while great carved columns support the floors. A wealth of jewels ornament the shrines and images contained in the temple.

But it is the exterior of the structure that is chiefly remarkable. Quite aside from the odd shape of the building, its workmanship is indeed exquisite. Marvelous carvings, reliefs and statues adorn the walls. Many of these are painted in vivid colors, others are grotesquely formed, many are bizarre. Certainly all are interesting.

That part of the building that is not hidden by statues and carvings is finished with tiling, all in delicate, lovely shades. Of course, time has dimmed the colors, but that is being remedied. After the repairs, which have already been started, the "Bottle" may be seen as it was many, many years ago.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Please tell me does writing reveal character? What could you tell of mine?

2. Is it proper to smile back at people if they smile at you? Or to answer to "hello"? It has never been done by me, but I have noticed other girls doing it and I am beginning to wonder if the young men who try to get acquainted with me, or who stop to admire me, think I am an [illegible], or maybe they think I am conceited and think I am the seventh wonder, but I don't.

THANK YOU.

I AM sure that handwriting does reveal character—"If philosophy could find it out," as Hamlet says. But, to my [illegible], I have no claim to knowing how to read it. The thing about handwriting that interests me and that is most appropriate for my column is the revelation it shows about a person's ability to be careful in letter-writing, to write with a proud carefulness, to use a fine letter-writing form. It is absolutely true that, in most cases, one can tell at once upon opening a letter, if the writer is a cultivated person, a person of breeding.

In your handwriting, and letter-form, judged from the point of view of letter-writing, I find carelessness in forming your letters and in making your capitals, carelessness, too, in your punctuation, and in the fact that you write several sentences together. Practice could so easily correct all of these lacks.

2. "The goblins will get you if you don't watch out," and if you smile promiscuously at people whom you do not know, and if you speak to people whom you do not know. It is wiser—and safer—for them to consider you an "icicle."

"LITTLE SINS" By KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard; a Battle of Hearts Between Girls

CHAPTER 43.

"JERRY——" she began.

The hand pressed hers quickly: a silencing pressure. "Don't," he said. "Please. It's easier if people don't say anything at all." His mouth quirked whimsically. "Left to my own devices," he explained, "I'm quite genial about it. I've developed into quite a Pollyanna. I think, well, it might have been both legs—and I think how I fooled a certain varicose vein—and so on.

"But the minute somebody comes along and feels sorry for me, then I begin to feel sorry for myself. I begin to think it was a damned fine leg at that, for all its faults. Serviceable. Handy to own."

She did not have to tell herself then that she pitied him. His flippancy was lacerating—the more so because it seemed quite effortless. He might have been speaking of some tiny minor mishap, like a bruise or the breaking of a nail. . . . Her emotion must have betrayed itself in her glance, for Jerry drew her hand to his lips and kissed the palm of it. "Thank you, honey," he murmured.

He released her hand and locked his two together behind his head on the shallow pillow. His eyes regarded her obliquely. "It's you I want to talk about," he stated. He was not smiling now. "Those bandages of yours—hit me where I live."

Gay's hands went swiftly to her throat and clasped it, in the gesture that was to be a habit of hers in days to come. Pity for herself, hovering always very near the surface, leaped uppermost, and eclipsed all other pity. Jerry ceased to be Jerry, crippled, sick, pathetically valiant, and became an Audience.

"Just think," she said, "I'll never be able to wear a low-necked evening gown again. Never." Her eyes had strayed, so that she missed Jerry's wince, the tightening of his lips. "The bandages aren't anything," she continued. "It's when they take them off! Great terrible jagged marks, one here, and one here, and one here—" she traced the lines on her chest with her finger—"and one that comes up on my neck, clear to here—"

"Don't!" he cried out.

She looked back at him vaguely; her vision was still focused upon the memory of that torn stitched flesh, her own flesh, glimpsed shudderingly whenever they changed the dressings.

"It's not your fault," she said mechanically. "I'm not blaming you, Jerry."

"Of course it's my fault. If I hadn't been drunk—"

She Said, Tentatively, 'It's Queer How It Happened'

She wondered, eyeing him, whether he knew how entirely his fault it was; whether he knew about the bottle. She decided that in all probability he did not. He would fail to recall that he had handed the bottle to her, to hold.

And they of the hospital, sparing him such anguish as they could, would not have enlightened him. Her mind acknowledged the rightness of this, but some small insensate demon in the back of it wished that he did know, insisted that he ought to know, itched to tell him.

She said tentatively. "It's queer how it happened—" And thought "I won't say any more, I won't!"

"[illegible]," agreed Jerry listlessly. "[illegible] told me."

Gay sat bolt upright, grasping the arms of her wheel chair. "Dolly told you?"

He nodded. "I made her. I'd thought it all over a thousand times, you see, lying here. I was sure it couldn't have been the windshield, and I had a hunch—I asked her, and kept asking, and she finally admitted my hunch was right."

"That was unkind of her," Gay said coldly.

"She couldn't help it. I knew, anyway. No," added Jerry, "it wasn't unkind. Dolly is never unkind."

"She's been here a lot?" asked Gay after a slight pause.

He nodded, but gave no other answer. "Of course," he resumed, "words are futile. I could tell you to my dying day how sorry I am and how I curse myself—I wouldn't have had it happen, Gay, for anything in the world—"

"I know," she said, as he broke off.

"There are two things," Jerry went on slowly, "that I know of that I can do toward compensation. They're very little things comparatively, but if you'll let me do them I'll at least feel I've done something. One is, I can send you to the best plastic surgeons in this country—or abroad, if they're better there—and see if they can't help. I'm sure they can, somehow. They must.

"The other—" He interrupted himself again and gazed at Gay, straight and soberly at her. He reached for her hand once more, and fitted her fingers between his fingers. "I can give you back to Alan," he said.

So! He was going to make it easy for her! She felt lighter of heart than she had for days, breathed more freely . . . even while she shrilled as wonderingly as though the notion was quite new to her, "But Jerry! Why?"

Still Holding Her Hand, He Smiled Lazily at Her

Still holding her hand, he smiled at her from under his lazy lids. "My dear," he said, "let's be honest. I know, and you know, that you don't love me—now. You don't any more want to marry me now than—than I want to marry my nurse. Don't think I'm criticizing you! I'm not. I don't blame you, not the least bit. You loved me because I was the ideal playmate for you; that was my appeal. And that's gone now, of course. I can't play any more." Again his whimsical, tilted smile. "The Referee—has ruled me out."

He covered her hand with his free one, and squeezed it hard. "So," he finished, "we'll call it quits, won't we."

It seemed to Gay that she ought to protest, that it was heartless not to protest at least a little; but she did not. What use really? Why argue, and pretend, and fib—only to reach the conclusion that had already, with an economy of words and embarrassment, been reached?

Jerry's final "won't we" had had no question mark on its end. It had not expected other than an affirmative silence. She gave it the latter. She sat holding tight to his hand, and looking at the roof of a house visible through the window, and thinking that the number of the Yale Club was Murray Hill eight-one-eight-o . . . eight-one-eight-o. . . .

"Alan will want you back, of course," observed Jerry.

"Of course," she echoed. After an instant she turned her head and eyed him somewhat uneasily. "What made you say that, Jerry? There isn't any doubt of it, is there?"

"Not that I know of. No, certainly not. He's mad about you. Only," said Jerry, "I think you may have to be rather diplomatic."

"I don't see why."

"You don't?" He smiled slightly. "Remember, Gay, your husband is nobody's fool. You left him for me. There can't help being a suspicion in his mind now that if I hadn't had this—mishap—you'd never have come back to him."

"But I would have!" cried Gay. And so high had the seesaw of her affections elevated Alan with Jerry's descent that she actually believed herself. "I adore Alan," she said earnestly. "I don't think I'd ever have divorced him, really, when it came right down to it. You fascinated me, Jerry—you were the ideal playmate, as you said yourself. But that wouldn't have lasted. Not even if you—if this hadn't happened. You mustn't think that this has made any difference. I'd have come to my senses in time, accident or no accident."

Jerry's eyes were amused, they were cynical, mocking. But his tongue accorded politely with what she had said. "Of course. And if you can sell that idea to Alan—" He folded his hands. "All's well that ends well."

"You think I can't?"

"On the contrary. I think," said Jerry, smiling at her, "—I have always found—that a gorgeous brown-eyed blonde can sell almost anything to practically anybody."

"I bow," said Gay, also smiling.

They were silent then. Jerry contemplated a scar in the ceiling over his head. Gay looked through the window again, wondering why his remarks about Alan had even dimly disturbed her. It was silly to feel disturbed. It was ridiculous to consider for one second such an absolute impossibility. . . . She decided that she would not consider it: that she would banish it from her mind completely and now.

She thought, "I'll talk." And spoke the first words that occurred to her: "I see you have Dolly's picture over there."

Both regarded the picture, Jerry longer than Gay. She glanced back at him and watched him as he looked at it.

"So this is love!" she said suddenly.

He nodded, not moving his eyes. "It always has been."

"Always?" Gay would not have been Gay if she had forborne the little arch reminder.

Jerry did not appear to hear it, and presently she said. "Well, Maybe you'll marry her after all—now that you've disposed of me?"

"No," said Jerry firmly, "I wont do that."

"I don't see why not,' Gay argued, rather diverted by the discovery that she could so argue and feel nothing at all. "You love her. You've just admitted it. And the only thing about you she didn't care for was the drinking, and you probably won't be wanting to do much of that from now on. Why don't you ask her to take you back?"

"She has already offered to."

"She has? Well, then—"

Jerry went on, unheeding. His voice marveled: "In spite of everything, Gay. She did it in the sweetest way you possibly can imagine. Not as if she were sorry for me, doing it out of pity, but as if she really wanted—"

He checked himself sharply, and Gay saw the muscles of his throat contract. "She's a good actress," he concluded dryly. "She doesn't love me. I know that. It's just her—beautiful loyalty. And her big heart."

Gay found nothing to say.

"I told her," said Jerry after a moment, "that I was in love with you, Gay. I told her you and I were going to be married—although I knew we wouldn't be. I told her everything I could think of to try and talk her out of it. Even about the rotten way I make my living." He thought a minute. "I never told you that, did I?"

"No."

"I publish little leather-bound books of questionable jokes, verse, anecdotes—and my agents peddle the books around on the quiet, chiefly in college towns." One corner of Jerry's mouth curled up. "Pretty, isn't it?"

Gay was staring at him curiously—think how little one really knew about the popele one knew best in this odd world remembering that she had never once heard Jerry tell a questionable story, nor make a risque remark.

"Jerry," she said, "I never dreamed—"

"Thanks," ironically.

She took a new tack. "Well, and what did Dolly say to that?" She supplemented: "I can't see exactly why you had to tell her that anyway, unless you just wanted to. I mean—did the argument need clinching? I should think that when you told her you loved me, that would have been quite sufficient. It wasn't true—but she didn't know it wasn't." There was a note of uncertainty in Gay's tone. She herself was not sure that it wasn't true. She was not sure of anything just now, but all confused.

"Yes," said Jerry. "She knew. I gave myself away, you see, inadvertently. When I was delirious, and again when I was coming out of the ether, I called—nobody's name but hers. Like a fool," he muttered.

"Oh. I see."

"The Heart Is Like the Sky"

-:- -:-

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

ONE day Cupid sits close, knees, wings, and toes and curls—though he isn't so careful about the curls, because they are natural—close and sullen under his little 'ella. For the rain pours, like silver necklaces, from the human heart. A sad heart, a mad heart, like the sky. Night in the mysterious human heart! A pale moon, covered and uncovered by flying rags of worried clouds, dark trees waving their branches in the overcast heaven of the heart, a wild wind in the heart and then silence, only a patter with falling tears. And Cupid bunches himself closer, smitten into silence, the talkative fellow, by the North-Pole look in the eyes that own the heart.

Another day! Every day is another day. "Manana" is truly worth sighing for, for "tomorrow," the other day, is always different. In the heart. Heaven shows itself again. The golden sun is out; green leaves are dancing; sudden flowers socking their faces and shaking out their perfume at the world. Sun and azure sky; birds singing; lambs kicking up their heels; in the human heart. The same that was yesterday dark and rainy. Sunshiny weather in the human heart! A clear day. Cupid sunning himself, with a ridiculous sunshade of pink. Happiness walking in the grass in her bare feet. Day time; singing and sunshine; in the happy heart. The singing is Cupid's gay voice. And the eyes that own the heart are almost shut with smiling, and a beckoning finger crooks itself rosily and says, "come hither!"

"The heart is like the sky, a part of Heaven." If your Heaven is cloudy, and the room of your heart is dark, remember that there is another day!

"The Wolf Man of Paris," by Sabatini

tion's right to demand of me my property and, at need, my life. But I do not recognize the nation's right to demand of me my soul . . ."

Chauviniere impatiently interrupted him. "We have abolished all that."

But Corbal went on as if the interruption had not been. "Nor do I recognize the nation's voice in this demand. With submission, citizen-judges, you were placed here to administer the existing laws and not to create new ones. The making of laws is the sole prerogative of the national convention, and any man or group of men infringing that prerogative and arrogating to themselves any such legislative right are themselves guilty of an incivisme for which they may be indicted."

Chauviniere admired the shrewdness and subtlety of this counter-attack, and was thankful that it was made before men of too low an order of intelligence to appreciate it. A growl of anger and mockery was all it drew from the assembly, and when that subsided the president spoke without emotion:

"You have three days for consideration, Citizen Corbal."

Corbal advanced a step, betrayed out of his imperturbability. The sudden perception that he stood before a wall of unreason, against which intelligent argument must shatter itself in vain, drove him to momentary madness. His eyes blazed in a face that passion turned from red to white.

"Three seconds would be too much, citizen-president, for consideration; three centuries not enough to alter my resolve to reject this infamy."

And whilst the crowd surged snarling and growling, the president, impassive as doom, insisted "Nevertheless, you have three days."

Tardily Corbal commanded himself. He reflected that further opposition now might deprive him of even those three days, which he would [illegible] that he might set his house in order. He resumed his habitual dignified calm, bowed once more to the court and took his departure.

"You see now," said Chauviniere quietly to the president, "what it is worth, this republicanism of the ci-devant vicomte. A superficial veneer underneath which we have ever the harsh, arrogant spirit of the aristocrat, a man, in his own estimation of a different clay from that out of which the people are fashioned. He burned with shame at the thought of debasing himself in an alliance with a peasant girl. You saw that. Is that republicanism?"

And Doucier, a little sadly, bowed his head. "You are right, citizen-representative," he sighed. "It required your wit to devise a test that should reveal the man's true nature. We have been deceived in him."

Chauviniere stood up, lean and wiry, put on his plumed hat and adjusted his cravat. "He has his choice between Filomene and the National Widow. Let us hope that he will prefer the little pullet, and that she will yet redeem him into a good republican."

Doucier laughed. He thought the citizen-representative amusing always, but that it was not given to everyone to have the wit to discern it.

At the leisurely pace of a man who meditated, Monsieur de Corbal took his way home up the hill through the April dusk. He did not relish the thought of dying. Even less, however, did he relish the thought of the horrible mesalliance by which he might save his life, [illegible] Chauviniere was right and that Monsieur de Corbal's [illegible] sentiments were not of the proper depth. The notion of supplying future Corbals with such an ancestress as Filomene was entirely repulsive to him.

Ten inches of snow under normal conditions equal one inch of rainfall. In the Sierra Nevada the average snowfall is from ten to thirty feet a year.

A python 25 feet long, a giraffe 20 feet tall, an elephant weighing four tons, and an insect measuring 52 inches, are among the "records" of the London Zoo.

England's sheep population is nearly half a million lower than it was in 1914, while she has over a million fewer pigs than she had in 1924.

The average number of snowy days in the year is 1½ at Rome, 5½ at Venice, 10 at Milan, 12 at Paris, 30 at Copenhagen and [illegible] at Petrograd.

THE FURTHER GUY WENT ON THE ROAD WITH THE SHOW, THE DEEPER THE INROAD INTO HIS BANKROLL. THEN BABE PERSUADED HIM TO TAKE THE COMPANY TO CHICAGO—HE DID—AND ADDED ONE MORE FLOP TO THEATRICAL HISTORY!

USING HIS LAST DOLLAR TO PAY OFF THE TROUPE, GUY SAID FAREWELL TO BABE—THEN APPEARED A MYSTERIOUS STRANGER, WHO PROVED TO BE BABE'S MILLIONAIRE FATHER! SHE REFUSED TO GO HOME UNLESS HE BOUGHT HER CONTRACT FROM GUY—HE DID—AND GUY'S ON HIS WAY BACK TO CORNHAY CITY WITH MORE MONEY THAN WHEN HE LEFT!!

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Sir—

My boss is a regular guy, a real good fellow. The other evening he took me to dinner and then to a srow.

On the way home I noticed he coughed quite a little, the evening being quite chilly. I am naturally tender-hearted, so when we arrived at my apartment I invited him in to try some of my cough medicine. Imagine my embarrassment when I found there was only enough in the bottle for a nip for myself.

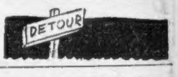
FAMOUS LAST WORDS
"Oh, yeah?"



FAMOUS COMPOSERS

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

GIOVANNI BATTISTI VIOTTI was the son of a blacksmith. He was born in Fontaneto da Po, Vercelli, Italy, on May 23, 1753. His father, who played the horn, taught the boy the rudiments of violin playing and so apt was he that he attracted the attention of the Bishop of Strambino, who brought the boy to the attention of the Prince della Cisterna. In 1766 the Prince placed him under the tuition of the violinist Pugnani at Turin, where Viotti became violinist in the court chapel.

In 1780 Pugnani made a tour to Germany, Russia and Poland, taking Viotti with him. Viotti had already made quite a name for himself as a violinist, and in Russia attracted the attention of the Empress Catherine II, who honored him with extraordinary favor.

In 1782 he went with Pugnani to London, where he at once established himself in the favor of the public. In Paris his success was greater even than it had been in London and he was universally acknowledged as unrivalled.

A concert which he gave in Paris in 1783 being poorly attended, and a rival mediocre violinist winning the plaudits of the public, Viotti abruptly closed his personal appearances and devoted himself to teaching and composing. The Prince de Subise appointed Viotti leader of his private orchestra, and in 1788 Viotti joined Leonard, Queen Marie Antoinette's hairdresser, in establishing an Italian opera at the Tuilleries. This opera was later transferred to the Theater de la Foire St. Germain in 1790 and was finally merged with the Theatre Feydeau in 1791.

The Revolution in 1791 compelled Viotti to go to London, where he gave a series of successful concerts. Coming under suspicion as an agent of the revolutionaries, he was compelled to leave England and go to Germany, where he stayed in retirement until 1794, when he returned to England. Success seeming to elude him, he gave up his musical career and embarked in the wine trade.

On a visit to Paris in 1802 Viotti was persuaded to give a concert before Cherubbini and others and astonished them by outrivalling his earlier performances.

It is probable that Viotti returned to London and remained there until about 1819. In this year, however, he was appointed director of the opera in Paris, which post he held until 1822, when he retired on a pension.

Viotti's influence as a teacher and player, especially through the efforts of one of his pupils, Rode, gained for him the sobriquet of "The father of modern violin playing."

Viotti's compositions are classics of violin-literature. He was the first to write violin concertos in the modern sonata form, which also displays the full resources of the orchestra. His playing was marked by purity of style, magnificent tone and poetic expression.

Viotti returned to London after being pensioned in Paris and died there on March 3 (or 10), 1824.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

EVE, according to John Erskine, had the right idea. When she married Adam, she had a fence built around the front yard to keep him in, nd then proceeded to keep him so BUSY that he forgot all about the "other woman."

* * *

The most prevalent form of highway robbery today is husband-stealing!

A girl who would not think of stealing another woman's pocketbook or pilfering her jewelry will casually help herself to any stray married man she happens to find lying around loose. The only woman who can be sure that her husband is safe is one whose husband is in jail or the burying ground.

* * *

Woman's inhumanity to woman is more glaring than ever; and men are getting wonderful breaks that they never dared to hope for.

Once a married man was considered his wife's legal property; but now he is considered fair game for every woman—and the world is full of freebooters! Once a married man was a humble creature; but now he is as cocky as a bachelor—and twice as easy!

Lots of men who have trotted along contentedly in double harness for years are now secretly chafing at the yoke and wondering why they ever tied themselves down to the burden and responsibility of one woman when they might be enjoying the kisses and flattery of a lot of women.

You may succeed in luring a man into marriage, but you never know these days how long you will succeed in holding him there. Marriage is becoming about as permanent as a "permanent wave."

But DON'T BLAME THE MEN!

It is the WOMEN who have let down the bars. And the sheep are all turning black and running wild. Men are naturally vain, weak creatures; and a little freedom and flattery goes right to their heads and makes them so dizzy that every one of them believes himself the original Don Juan!

This is hard on the wives of today whose husbands have heard the call of the wild. But it is the wives of tomorrow, the freebooters themselves, who will wake up some day to discover that there are no more "marrying men"—and will wonder how it happened! It is the husband-snatchers who will wish that they had not started the game of "Husband, Husband—Who's Got the Husband?"

GENUINE PHILLIPS MILK OF MAGNESIA For Troubles due to Acid INDIGESTION ACID STOMACH HEARTBURN HEADACHE GASES-NAUSEA

What most people call indigestion is actually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after-effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

TANNED FACES ON ALL SIDES IN ARIZONA

baby who must be comforted at all hazards.

Tanned until they looked like Apaches themselves—I never can get over the pleasant shock of a pair of blue eyes in a tanned face, can you, big, husky, strapping, good-natured, humorous, kindly fellows, so full of life and the joy of living that it is like an electric shock even to pass them by the road.

Health seekers, anxious and full of pathetic hope. You'd think this country of burning sun and wild wind was the last place in the world for an ill man or a delicate woman, but it really is a vast hospital and often the sick man gets well and the delicate woman finds her strength out here in the savage desert.

Gay wayfarers spinning from town to town with just enough money to take them from one gas station to another, how on earth do they manage to get through?

IN OLD TRUCKS

Old broken down trucks with old fashioned lanterns hanging under them, Pa and Ma and Grandma and Aunt Susan and little brother and big sister and the baby all sitting on the floor of the truck and staring at the world with strange lack-lustre eyes that do not miss one single detail of the dress, the manner, the bearing, the accent of those they like to call tenderfeet in the Arizona vernacular.

Mexicans—by the hunderds, by the thousands—the men in broad sombreros, the women with their mantillas draped gracefullly over their heads. What faces of romantic tragedy they have, the old Mexican women. You see one sitting crosskneed by the highway out in the blazing sun with her black mantilla wrapped around her head and body, like a nun's dress.

She's always rolling or lighting or smoking a "cigretto"—and as you pass she raises to you a pair of burning black eyes, still alight with the fire and fury of youth, and they are set in the face lined and furrowed with a tragic intensity that makes them look like one of the weired sisters or a classic fury come to life again and looking with hypnotic and Medusa-like gaze upon the folly of light-hearted youth as it rushes by.

Poenix, a glorious trpical city, set in palms and rich with flowers and green with velvet lawns.

Mexicans there, too, hundreds of them, sitting in the glaring sunshine on their haunches, leaning against the wall and rolling their cigarettes, working on the streets in their deliberate, unhaurried fashion, flashing a black look at you from under a black hat, as you go by so fast.

TOO FAR FROM SEA

The waiter in the resturant is a Greek, and a handsome one at that. He comes from 19th and Guerrero sts., San Francisco, it appears, and he is not fond of Phoenix for all its beauty and luxurious growth.

"Too far from the sea," says the Greek, "but"—and he lays his hand upon his chest with the dramatic fervor of his race—" 'Tis here I must stay until I am well again."

The boy at the soda fountain comes from the Bronx in New York.

"What are you doing out here?" —when we asked him that he taps his chest with a delicate middle finger, grins and says, "T. B."

The young man at the filling station—oh, he's from somewhere out Elgin way, near Chicago.

"Pretty near ready to go home," he says. "I was pretty bad when I got here, eight months ago. They'll be surprised to see me when I turn up looking like Jim Jeffries, eh, what?"

And he really did look like Jeffries or some other prize fighter, with his broad shoulders and deep chest and thick neck — yet, less than a year ago he could not walk a block without utter exhaustion.

Good hotel in Phoenix, modern, up-to-date, cooled by cooled-air. Everyone at the desk a bit testy and bad tempered, the waiter a trifle misanthropic, the bellboys just a bit sardonic—everybody here to get well. Some failing in the fight, but most of them winning and winning with amazing suddenness.

JUST A VACATION

We picked up a visiting stranger in Phoenix, tall fellow well-dressed, aquiline features, straight black hair, deep-set black eyes, looked as if he came from Oklahoma, where the Cherokees are getting rich on the oil wells which have suddenly sprung up right in the midst of their ancient territory.

Yes, he was from Oklahoma, so far we were right.

A decorator of moving picture theaters, off on a vacation—he had his wild Irish rose—as he called her —and their three children with him.

Oh, just for a trip and somebody at a garage dropped a nut, or a bolt into something or other in the car—he told us all about it with great attention to details—but what I don't know and do not care about mechanics would astonish you.

And on a steep hill the bolt or the nut got to going round and round and tore the whole inside of the car to pieces and there they were, he and wild Irish rose and the three kids, without a drop of water and no shade and oh, boy! they were glad to see the Mexican that took them back to town to the auto camp.

He gave the flivver to the Mexican, he said.

He could not afford the time or the money to bother with it and the wife and kids were coming up to El Paso on the train and he would like to get to El Paso first and telegraph for some money. Oh, yes, his firm would send it to him, they would gamble about it, but they would send it, and would we—

We had been warned about taking strangers into the car, but the man from Oklahoma looked clean and sane and honest, so we took him and, dear me, how glad we were that we did.

THEN HE HELPED

We picked up a railroad spike in one of the tires and one of the other tires had a plain, slow leak and the heat did something to the third tire and who so busy to help as Oklahoma, with his broad shoulders and his quick laugh and his light-hearted comment on the world, the flesh and the devil.

He didn't think very highly of the devil, the man from Oklahoma, and his wife didn't aprove of dancing and she thinks he smokes far to many cigarettes, and he has promised her to try to cut them out entirely but somehow he is always going to begin —next day.

Went overseas with a fighting unit, spent some time in the hospital, got court-martialed for being A. W. O. L., met some darn pretty girls in Belgium, didn't care for the French girls. Couldn't see the English girls at all not at all, too big and bony, I'm telling the world.

But the Belgians, oh, boy!

No, he would never go over again, neither would any of his buddies. They offered him some land when he came home, some of this desert land right here, near Phoenix. He came up and gave it the once over and said, "No, thank you, not today, Uncle Sam" and that was all. Works for a string of theaters they are building in Oklahoma and Texas, and all that country, paints them up, you see, to look pretty.

Goes from town to town and takes his wife and the kids with him, what's the use of living without the wife and kids? No, not such a lot of money in this business, but, lord, what's money anyhow?

Fun means a whole lot more. Maybe he won't have so much when he gets to be an old man, but by that time Buddy and Sister will be able to take care of him and the wild Irish rose.

Live while you're livin', that's the motto of "Oklahoma" and the wild Irish rose. She's for living while you're living', too. Kind of jealous, though, but you can't blame her. He's jealous, too—man is always jealous of a woman when he really loves her.

Black eyes, she's got, the wild Irish rose, black hair, too. They say a dark man always likes a blonde woman. "Well, let them say it, I ain't quarreling with them, but say, those Belgian girls weren't blonde, I'm telling you, and neither is my little daughter and I would not give one look from her black eyes for all the blondes in the world.

"Politics—that's not for mine. I got enough of them in Uncle Sam's army. I'm through. It's all the same who's President, ain't it? Lots of them grumble about Coolidge, but he never took no money out of my pocket and the little theaters want pretty pictures on them just the same.

"Gosh, what a wind—whey! That sand stings like pepper—well, here we are at El Paso. So long—happy days—meet you on the road somewhere next year, maybe."

A typical American, Oklahoma. Good luck and a light heart go with you, all along the road.

EDUCATION IS WORTH A LOT OF WORK

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

This will interest thousands who are being graduated this month, as well as others who possess or yearn for diplomas. The fact that education is worth a lot of hard work is daily brought to the attention of those who mingle with leaders in the world of business and finance.

• • •

Years ago the head master of the Boston Latin School was approached by a young man who wanted to go to Yale. The youngster had just arrived in Boston from the West. That was in 1278. He was given instructions as to how he should go ahead. The young man was Edward M. Herr, destined later to become president of Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.

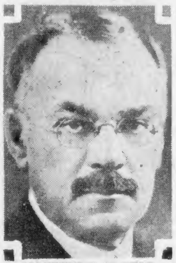
President Herr, telling of his battle for an education, says: "It was lucky I knew how to work. I had to hurry, for I had only a little money, and at first it was all going out and nothing coming in. I put in ten hours a day on my studies, but it paid in the end. I passed all the examinations without a condition. And I went to Yale.



PRESIDENT E. M. HERR

"I had trimmed my sails close, and I had picked up an honest dollar wherever I saw it, but once more when I struck New Haven I was practically without money. I had a long row to hoe, and nobody was underwriting my expenses. I had to find something that would keep me going. So I tutored. Sometimes I put in as much as fourteen solid hours a day at it and squeezed in my own studying where I could.

"It was hard. Sometimes I was close to brain fag, but it did me good. I learned as I tutored, and when I left college with a degree of Ph. B. I had a very respectable nest egg laid away. I was 24 years old and five years of the twenty-four had been put in at hard work in telegraph offices and on the railroad. I was tough and came through with sound health, but it cost me a good share of my eyesight—a penalty which I am still paying and probably always shall pay. But that was the chance I took. It was worth the candle."

Former Senator Harry P. Gifford of the Salem Five Cents Savings Bank today attended the big banking convention in Philadelphia, along with more than half a hundred Greater Boston bankers, "started something" when he declared bank employes are underpaid. He insisted they are the most underpaid class of workers in the country, considering their responsibilities. No recent statement has created more discussion, as the writer hears it.

H. P. Gifford

One Wall Street writer who said there was no reduction in brokerage loans expected last week later declared the $135,000,000 reduction announced was "in line with expectations." Which is one way of admitting he was right!

• • •

In the old days of New England railroading trains and even locomotives, as many are aware, bore names in which a great deal of pride was taken. Our opinion is that the new management of the Boston & Maine, under President George Hannauer, in reviving this custom, is following a line that spells continuous betterment of service.

• • •

You all know the names of the "crack" passenger trains. Here are the new names of the important B. & M. freight trains:

9050—The Pathfinder.
9051—The Big Chief.
9052—The Grayhound.
9053—The Hoosac Flyer.
M. R. 6—The Hubber.
F. U. 1—The North Star.
C. B. 3—The Coaster.
B. J. 3—The Premier.
J. B. 390—The Scout.
P. M. 1—The Clipper.
M. P. 2—The Forest City.
H. M. 1—The Mohawk.
M. S. 2—The Nonotuck.
W. M. 1—The Westerner.
M. W. 2—The Night Hawk.

Suggestions for names of freights were asked for by the management of the B. & M. Edward H. O'Neil, East Fitchburg car shop clerk, sent in the largest number, and had four accepted. "The Big Chief" was suggested by Charles W. Colburn, an Athol stockholder. J. R. Beegan, East Lynn towerman, suggested "The Hubber." Miss Alice M. McAnagny, clerk in the terminal division superintendent's office, and Mr. Colburn, both suggested "The Scout," first train down the Merrimack Valley, reminiscent of old Indian days.

STABILIZATION OF COCOA PRICE SOUGHT

Millions of dollars a year might be saved by American chocolate manufacturers through stabilization of cocoa prices, according to Frazier Jelke & Co. in a review of this market.

"What is apparently needed in the United States to stabilize prices is the co-operation of American manufacturers to meet any combination on the part of British or other foreign growers," it is stated. "If a British pool has been formed in Africa to control production, as reported, it has resulted from the need to check further demoralization of their market."

STOCK TURNED IN FOR GAS MERGER

New York, June 19—Merger of Consolidated Gas Company and the Brooklyn Edison Company has become effective in so far as the latter company is concerned. More than the required 70 per cent of Brooklyn Edison stockholders have deposited their shares, according to announcement made by Matthew S. Sloan, president of Brooklyn Edison.

Stock of Brooklyn Edison flowed steadily in to the committee in consent of the merger so that at the close of business well over the 70 per cent needed was received. A large amount of stock was held by those who have voiced consent to the merger and will deposit their shares within the next few days.

Bankers interested in the consolidation expect that it will be consummated and the consolidated organizations operating under one management before the close of July, as consent of Consolidated Gas stockholders and of the Public Service Commission is expected by that time.

Consolidated Gas Company is preparing notice to stockholders of a special meeting on June 14 at which time vote will be taken on the planned consolidation. At least 66 2-3 per cent of the Consolidated Gas stockholders must approve the merger and considerable more than that number apparently favor the plan.

Consent of the Public Service Commission will be applied for in the near future.

Consolidation of the Consolidated Gas Company and the Brooklyn Edison Company will be the first step in $1,000,000,000 combination of all the gas and utility companies serving Greater New York and environs, as exclusively forecast by the International News Service several months ago.

When Consolidated and Brooklyn Edison are joined it is understood that two operating subsidiaries will be formed. One will operate all the gas companies and the other manage all the electric light and power properties of the organization.

Radio Dialog

"A LUMBERJACK YARN" is the subject of the Soconyland sketch which will be broadcast at 7:30 tonight over WEEI. The scene is laid in the big Maine woods. A labor shortage complicated by a feud of long standing between the straw-boss and the new cook pro-provides a plot into which musical numbers by a violinist and a male quartet are woven.

New Columbia Series

Chiquita, the latest composition by the authors of "Ramona" and "Tschaikowskiana," two symphonic jazz selections never before heard in public, will be featured by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra during the first Columbia Phonograph hour, to be broadcast over a coast-to coast hookup of the NBC system, from 10:00 to 11:00 o'clock tonight. The program will be heard locally through WEEI. The Paul Whiteman Rhythm Boys will participate in vocal refrains, and Vaughn de Leath, contralto crooner, will be heard during the orchestra's playing of a Salon arrangement of George Gershwin's "The Man I Love."

Musical Wooing

THE SEIBERLING SINGERS tonight will give an air recital of musical love-making. Songs sung on the moonlit Mississippi levees, melodies crooned to the Geisha girls of far Japan, tunes that Broadway sings to its cosmopolitan youth, make up the program of a wide variety of moods and occasions. It runs from "Una Furtiva Lagrima" (A Furtive Tear), in Donizetti's opera, "L'Elisire d'Amore" to Eric Coates' lovely English ballad "I Heard You Singing."

Old Part-Song

"THE BULL DOG on the Bank," a favorite old part-song of male quartets of other years, will be presented by four members of the Stromberg-Carlson sextet during their program at 8 o'clock.

Cornetist Plays Aria

"MY HEART AT THY SWEET VOICE," from Saint-Saens' opera, "Samson and Delilah," will be played by Del Staigers, cornetist, during the program by the Goldman Band at 8:30 o'clock through WBZ. The band, directed by Edwin Franko Goldman, will present a program of arias from the best known operas. Among these will be the processional march from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba"; Wagner's "Rienzi" overture, based upon a novel by Bulwer; excerpts from "Le Coq d'Or," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, and the finale to Act III of Ponchielli's "La Gioconda."

Eveready Hour

THE HALL JOHNSON SINGERS will be heard in a new program of spirituals and novelty arrangements of popular songs during the next Eveready Hour.

Teaching Son to Hold Rod Isn't Fishing, Court Decides

Fitchburg, June 19—Training the young idea to become an Isaak Walton is not fishing, as Raymond E. Wiles of Everett demonstrated in district court here, to the discomfiture of Game Wardens Peck and Lovely.

They arrested the Everett man when they saw him sitting on a pier at Flagg's pond, holding a rod in one hand, while the other was around the waist of his five-year-old son.

Wiles said he was not fishing at all, but showing the little fellow how to hold a rod. He was discharged.

800 CHANDLER EMPLOYES AT BIG OUTING

Eight hundred employes of Chandler & Company, members of the Mutual Benefit Association, spent the holiday at Ferncroft Inn at Middleton. The occasion was the annual outing of the organization.

The day was divided between sports and dancing. In the forenoon men, women and girls ran three-legged races, chased potatoes and peanuts, did the speedways via wheelbarrows and sacks, and finally dashed in for the nine course dinner that prepared them for an even more strenuous afternoon.

Dancing followed for those who wanted it, and a baseball game in the athletic field was staged for the store fans. The married men and the singles battled almost even in a nine-inning tilt, but the bachelors finally won out, 7 to 2.

In the women's races the winners were: Potato race, Rose Walsh, Sadie Morgan, A. Walsh; three-legged race, Hazel McDonald and Gussie Taylor, D. Gallivan and M. Daley; sack race, Rose Losperunato, H. Thompson, Sadie Morgan.

In the girls' races: 50-yard dash, Rose Walsh, G. Taylor, H. McDonald; shoe race, Peg Rooney, Marie Veno, Rose Losperunato.

In the men's races: Potato race, Paul Marr, William Low, Charles Low; 100-yard dash, William Gallagher, Thomas McNamara, Edward Dillon; half-mile, Ray Babb, W. Dignan, E. Dillon; wheelbarrow race, F. Davis and A. Russo, W. Dignan and H. Fournier.

During the dinner F. Goldthwaite Sherill and A. Barry Bacon, vice presidents of Chandler and Company, guests of the occasion, addressed the gathering and expressed their good wishes and congratulations.

Officers of the association are: President, W. F. Dickey; vice president, Warren Milliken; secretary, Peggy Yonkers; treasurer, Helen McEnroy; board of directors, Helen McLaughlin, Allen Bryson, Mollie Falvey, Warren Scheffler, Helen Stevens, P. J. Hanlon, Barbara Judson, Lorenzo Harris and George Reed.

Danvers, June 19—While being pursued by Motorcycle Officer Nangle, John I. Kozel of Third st., Chelsea, operating a light coach automobile, made a sudden turn on Burley st., crashed into another machine and his own car was overturned.

The officer seized 50 gallons of alcohol in Kozel's car and arrested him for illegal transportation. Other charges will be placed against him in court, police said. Kozel escaped with a sprained ankle and other minor injuries. The four occupants of the other car, operated by Benjamin Fagg of Forest st., Danvers, were all injured. Mrs. A. M. COOLIDGE STILL KEPT TO LODGE BY RAINS

Superior, Wis., June 19 (AP)—President Coolidge had sufficient documents to work on at his Brule river residence today not to need to come to his executive offices to be busy.

Apparently abandoning his policy of previous years of relegating work exclusively to his office, Mr. Coolidge yesterday ordered the files of some of the more pressing matters awaiting his action to be brought out to Cedar Island Lodge. On these he spent considerable time yesterday, leaving, however, ample work for today.

The poor state of the roads into Superior from the executive residence, still half flooded from the rains of past days, caused Everett Sanders, his secretary, to advise Mr. Coolidge not to leave the lodge today.

The chief executive was therefore prepared to stay away from his office one more day—the fifth since his arrival—and to mingle work with what open air exercise and relaxation the variable weather would permit.

Brule, Wis., June 19 (AP)—The quiet and seclusion enjoyed by President Coolidge during the first four days of his vacation in the North woods has been anything but soothing to the correspondents assigned to the summer White House. Rain has kept the President home.

Little information has trickled through from Cedar Island Lodge as to what he is doing, the greater part of it being that the President "may or may not go into executive offices at Superior tomorrow."

If the President wished for seclusion, he would seem to have realized his desire. He has nothing within miles of him more disturbing than the gentle movement of the Brule river and the dignified swaying of the tall, slender Norway and Jack pines, the spruce, the cedar and the black ash.

The Pioneer Spirit

Bay State's Girl Lindy an Inspiration to the Young Women of America

The pioneer spirit of the early American colonists lives again in Miss Amelia Earhart.

This Boston girl—first woman ever to cross the Atlantic in an airplane—flew not for money nor for fame. She braved the perils of fog and sea and gale for a cause—the science of aviation.

The Bay State's girl Lindbergh displayed the courage of the Pilgrim Fathers, of the hardy men and women who won the West for civilization. She typified the Spirit of America, of young American womanhood. On a day given over by many to the frivolities of a holiday she spanned the ocean, added a new chapter to the air history of America.

A message Miss Earhart sent just before she took off from Trepassey Bay is typical. She wired:

"Please get across the idea that I am not flying for money. You know well that I am doing this because of my interest in aviation, and because I could not refuse the opportunity presented to me to go on this scientific adventure."

Miss Earhart richly deserves the honors Europe will shower on her. She deserves, as President Coolidge cabled her, "the great admiration of the people of the United States." Her flight was, as Secretary of State Kellog said, "A magnificent achievement."

Miss Earhart spanned the ocean on Bunker Hill Day. She plans to return home on July 4. It is a fitting date. She has helped to write America's Declaration of Independence in the air.

Tom Heeney Smiles

Tom Heeney Thinks

TOM HEENEY SMILES—"MY CHANCES ARE AS GOOD AS TUNNEY'S"

Here's Tom Heeney, the New Zealander who will fight Gene Tunney for the championship of the world, and can give any man a hard battle. He stands 5 feet 10½ inches barefoot—just the height of the great Sullivan—and weighs 200 pounds, fifteen more than Sullivan at his best. His body is thick, springy and enduring, with big, smooth, quick muscles. He has never been knocked out.

The important title and the big crowd that will pay $1,500,000 and go wild over the fight, do not excite Heeney. He smiles and says: "I respect Gene Tunney. It will be an honor to meet him, but he is ONLY ONE MORE MAN to fight. He has been in the ring only twice in two years, and I've been at it all the time. My chances are as good as his."

When you watch Heeney smile as he talks about the battle you see that he means it when he says this is only one more job for him to do. He seems as easy in his mind today as Tunney was about facing Dempsey just before he took his title.

That happy frame of mind is a great help in any kind of

ARGUMENTS IN FAVOR OF A SALES TAX

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE reports published in California about the amount of money received from the tax on the consumption of gasoline throw light upon the whole question of taxation.

This tax has been paid, as a rule, without protest, and has yielded enormous returns without weighing especially heavy upon any one class of people.

The income tax is often a burden and always a nuisance. Many business concerns must keep a special man employed all the time on their books to prepare returns for the income tax and those returns are apt to be overturned three years after they are sent in and necessitate doing the work all over.

And the amount paid for income tax often seriously injures the prosperity of the business.

A sales tax would be widely spread over the entire population and all classes of people would take part in its payment. This amount would be large simply because it is contributed by many and would not be large because of great sums that were given by a few concerns.

The ideal tax is one which rests upon the whole population and one which is not felt.

The sales tax meets this requirement. It would be collected with uniformly less labor than any other kind of tax, it would rest equally upon everybody, and would work injury to no one in particular.

It is a legitimate method of collecting money and one that has been often used. It is democratic and practical.

It has been endorsed by many of the most gifted minds of the nation and by almost everyone who studies the subject without being obsessed by pre-disposing judgments.

A man or a concern should be allowed to make all the money that can be made.

Under modern conditions the only way to achieve success in business is to benefit the whole population. In amassing its fortune the Ford Company and the General Motors Company and other companies have spread prosperity to others in increasing their own returns.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ONLY those who have suffered a very great deal will understand what I am about to say. But to those I speak with a deep and tender comprehension.

Edna St. Vincent Millay once wrote a poem called "The Merry Maid." It is the story of a woman who laughed with a broken heart! Here are the first two verses—

"Oh, I am grown so free from care
Since my heart broke!
I set my throat against the air,
And laugh at simple folk!

"There's little kind and little fair
Is worth its weight in smoke
To me that's grown so free from care
Since my heart broke."

Do those verses sound bitter and cynical to you? They are not. They are true and beautiful.

We hear too much about what life means to the young, the successful, the healthy and joyous and far too little about what life may mean to the unfortunate. That is bad, for there are actually more sad people in the world than happy ones, and most of us must come to sadness before the end. It is well to know whether life can hold anything for us after our hearts are broken. If we could only be sure that it does we might have the courage to go on, when our little plans have been wrecked.

It does! Indeed the greatest experiences come only after we have lost all that seemed to make existence worth while.

Happy people are bound people.

They are bound by those things which give them happiness—by love and companionship, by health and possessions and comfort and security. They are also bound by a fear of the loss of these things.

Only those who have lost everything are really free. They are the only ones who really stand alone.

Fear can no longer bind them for they have learned the futility of Things.

Fear can no longer shackle them for Fear has done its worst to them and they still survive.

Love can no longer fail them for they have found that it is not what we get in love but what we give that matters and endures.

Nor can death menace them. For having faced death they know that it is no more mysterious nor difficult than life and that those who go with death are, in reality, no farther from us than those who walk by our side.

But there is still one greater than all thees to the bankrupt and broken-hearted. They may be freed from Self—For when the heart is broken it ceases to be a cell and we may step over its shattered walls, if we will, into our greater life.

This what MAY happen to you after your heart is broken if you are willing to let it happen. You, too, may learn to laugh as "The Merry Maid" laughed. But you must be willing to learn.

FREEDOM IS ONLY FOR THOSE WHO HAV? THE COURAGE TO FACE IT. IT IS NOT FOR THOSE WHO LOOK BACK AT SHATTERED DREAMS.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only more dangerous. —Froude.

One picture in ten thousand, perhaps, ought to live in the applause of mankind, from generation to generation, until the colors fade and blacken out of sight or the canvas rot entirely away. —Hawthorne.

New York Day by Day
by
O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 19—Broadway's change from a pleasant pastel to a garish lithograph is almost complete. Only a few old time aspects of the famous thoroughfare remain. It has doubtless more snap and that quality called "color" than ever before, but the Broadway of other days is no more.

What has been called the Boweryization of Broadway began when trade began its northward march on Fifth ave. That was about 15 years ago. The metamorphosis was slow but certain. Old landmarks began to vanish and the present Midway Plaisance jangle took root.

Chop suey caravansaries supplanted such stately cafes as Churchill's, Rector's and Shanley's. Magic and souvenir shops, quick photo parlors bloomed where saloons once held forth. In every crevice lodged an orange juice counter or theatrical ticket agency.

The facades of big buildings and hotels were sliced up for cubicle shops of florists, haberdasheries and such. Walk-up tailors, dancing academies and beauty parlors took almost complete possession of the first and second floors. Dignity chrystalized into commercial cacophony.

The ballyhoos of auctioneers for fake jewelry sales are yelping in every block. Husky voiced barkers for yap wagons harangue the multitudes at prominent corners. Even pitch men may be found on the curbs hawking fanciful gee-gaws. The Broadway sport is a complacent mixture of the lower East Side and Times sq.

The flaccid material ease of Broadway has seeped into side streets running off either rip. There are the theaters, the chop houses frequented by theatrical folk, the casting agencies, tap dancing and acrobatic schools and sundry institutions that gave Broadway its savour.

The opulence of Broadway is now maintained largely by the ornate cinema temples. Nearly all the famous Broadway legitimate theaters have become modernized. The Winter Garden alone maintains the girl and the leg show tradition. The old order changeth.

IN the old days that strip of Broadway known as the Rialto and stretching from Herald sq. to 42d st. offered a picturesque promenade in the afternoon. All the famous players in town could be seen there at one time or other. A leisurely small town friendliness existed. Shin kicking and elbow jabbing had not become a part of the Broadway fun. Open carriages cruised the curbs to carry you up to Central Park. Gold digging was in its infancy and the winking, over-dressed ladies were generally just "percentage girls," satisfied if you permitted them to pilot you into concert halls to buy a drink.

A PUNCH drunk fighter at the Garden was feebly striking out at his opponent and missing.

"Toss in the sponge!" shouted a galleryite. "He's only hitting from memory."

THERE is a theory that only men with savings dare take business risks that may result in their financial salvation. Having anchors to the windward 's, of course, pleasant, but not always necessary. At a luncheon the other day were 10 highly successful men who were broke and in debt when they took the plunge into fields in which they thought they were better suited. And all made the grade.

ONE of these gentlemen in early days of affluence brought his father to New York from a night watch job in the Middle West. As he prospered he tried to give his parent more luxury, but found the old gentleman could not accustom himself to such spending and was eating meals in a cheap cafe. The son took him to one of the best restaurants in town, had a full meal and told him the price was 50 cents. He then made a deal with the headwaiter, and now when his father goes there, no matter what he orders, he is given a check for 50 cents, and he gravely leaves a 10-cent tip.

MANY of us would like to be escorted—if I seem to be resisting, don't mind, I walk that way—to the Colony restaurant and have a prankish relative play the same joke on us. I respect the Colony. That's where I paid $21 for a round of imported bird shot known as caviar, without crying out loud until I reached the sidewalk.

struggle. The man who worries about his chances prevents himself from winning. Worry kills strength.

Heeney landed in New York a year and a half ago, with ambition to get to the top in fighting. He is a steady boxer, always boring in. He looks serious when he talks about his early battles.

"I got plenty of hard knocks but not much coin," he says. "Still it was fun to meet big fellows who were all trying hard. I was lucky enough to win, and every bout made me better for the next. Paolino Uzcudun, the woodchopper, hit me the hardest, but didn't feaze me. Woodchoppers are tough. I've chopped a lot myself."

Heeney was a blacksmith and a fine football player when he enlisted, at nineteen, in the World War. He beat Jack Squires for the championship of South Africa and Bartley Madden for the championship of Ireland. In New York he beat Charley Anderson, Jack DeMave and Bud Gorman, and knocked out Jim Maloney of Boston in one round. He bested Johnny Risko in ten rounds and Jack Delaney in fifteen. A fifteen-round draw with Uzcudun annoyed him.

"What will you do against Tunney?" Heeney was asked.

"Go at him and hit him, same as the rest," Heeney answered, the smile dancing again in his eyes and playing over his rugged features. "I respect Gene, you understand, but I'll mix it with him as soon as anyone. He's not fought much lately, so maybe he'll be tired after ten or a dozen rounds. Then I ought to outlast him and beat him.

"I'm not saying I will do this or that; but I'm a tryer and I promise you I'll try."

The above is written by one who knows all about boxing, and will interest millions of young men.

BUT, in a few years, win or lose, Heeney will be forgotten. TRY TO DO SOMETHING worthwhile.
